NONPARTISANS MEET HERE TO ADOPT COURSE

Prediction Made League Will Keep Candidates in G. O. P. Column, Name Others

INDORSE LAFOLLETTE?

Prediction Also Made That Formal Action Will Be Taken by the Conference

The Nonpartisan League State Conference, at its opening session here today, named Ralph Ingerson of Elston, chairman and Judge John C. Fox of Minot, secretary. A credentials committee composed of F. A. Vogel of Coleharbor, Herman Hardt of Napoleon and Gerald Nye of Cooperstown was named, after the method of procedure had been settled.

At the opening of the conference this morning, the question of the authority and scope of the conference arose immediately, which precipitated sharp discussion as to whether the state executive committee of three members still would have power to decide the policies of the league or whether the conference action would be binding. Members of the state executive committee held that since a conference, instead of a convention, was being held, the committee was responsible. The result of the discussion was a recognition of the conference as merely advisory to the executive committee, with members of that body giving assurance it would follow the advice given.

The conference had expanded to include about 75 nonpartisan two-thirds of them not specifically invited, and it was decided to organize on a convention basis to some extent. A credentials committee was named. This committee's report was to be the first business of the afternoon session, the morning session having postponed discussion of the problems before the league until after the credentials committee's report.

For LaFollette
Predictions that Robert M. LaFollette's candidacy for President would be endorsed by the Nonpartisan League Nonpartisans as the conference got under way. Among those who made this prediction was William Lemke of Fargo, former attorney-general. While there was some opposition to the national campaign to the extent of an endorsement, the LaFollette sentiment was strong among the 75 or so who had gathered for the conference.

The LaFollette campaign in this state, according to information to several LaFollette men at the conference, is in the hands of Senator Lynn J. Frazier.

One Knutson of Grand Forks, Roy Frazier of Crosby and S. C. McDonald of Bismarck, composing the State Executive Committee, said there was no formal program before the conference. The subjects to be discussed, however, included: the attitude of the league as an organization toward the LaFollette candidacy, attitude on suggestions advanced in some league newspapers that the entire Republican state ticket of the June 25 primary be endorsed, suggestion that all Nonpartisans withdraw from the Republican ticket and run on a complete ticket to be placed in the Independent column, that candidates be named to oppose the Independents successful in the primary, and the attitude of the league toward the suggestion of the Farmer-Labor Party that a candidate for Governor be entered under the name of this party with the hope of establishing it on the ballot in the future.

R. H. Walker of Yucca, chairman of the Farmer-Labor Party of the state, was present for a generation. He said probably a dozen would be present.

"We favor a third party, the Farmer-Labor Party, of course," said Mr. Walker. "We would like to see the League establish the Farmer-Labor Party in the state." Senator Ralph Ingerson, an advocate of a third party, also was present, but entirely in the League council.

Predict Result
Several Nonpartisans who have had an important place in the league's conference here today predicted that the League's primary would continue to run as Republicans in the fall, and that either the League would place candidates in the Independent column to oppose successful Independents or would support Leaguers who were nominated in the Nonpartisan League Party, which has a column on the ballot.

"We will not give up what we have got," said one Nonpartisan, who declared the suggestion that the Republican Nonpartisan candidates resign and become Independent candidates would fall flat.

Another question before the organization was endorsement of a candidate for Congress in the Second district against Thomas Hall, nominated by Republicans. John N. Hagen of Bismarck and D. C. Poindester of Jamestown, now state auditor, both were aspirants for endorsement of (Continued on page three.)

Conference Meets Behind Closed Doors to Discuss Sentiment of the Party

UNINVITED PRESENT

Although the Nonpartisan League State Executive Committee had specifically invited in for the conference on the organization's political course, members from each Congressional district and candidates, scores more came anyway. There probably were 75 Leaguers to enter the conference, enough coming that a larger hall than had been ordered was secured.

"We didn't get invited but, we came anyway; this business of five from each Congressional district doesn't go," Herman Hardt of Napoleon told friends in the hotel lobby here.

The state committee had, however, issued a general invitation to all Leaguers to come who desired to.

The meetings were in secret again, a departure from the rule of the last few conventions. There was some objection to this course, but the executive committee ruled it was a conference and not a convention.

Many of the League war horses were present, and R. H. "Dad" Walker of Yucca, chairman of the Farmer-Labor Party in the state, which now exists chiefly on paper, gathered a dozen cohorts for a separate meeting to talk over the affairs of that party.

Third Party Sentiment
There was much third party sentiment among the Leaguers, considerable of which disappeared during the night, as many of those who had won on the Republican ticket in the primary. There also was some sentiment for letting the straight Republican ticket ride through.

"That comes mostly from Grand Forks and Bismarck, from office seekers," said one Leaguer, who was for putting up candidates against Shafer, J. A. Kitchen and John Steen, nominated by Independents.

Some Leaguers were in conversation with T. B. Casey of Dickinson, Democratic nominee for Attorney-General, but there appeared to be no sentiment for endorsing him as against Attorney-General Shafer.

Predictions were freely made that LaFollette would be endorsed, one such prediction coming from one who had opposed endorsement of LaFollette in the state convention last February.

Although the third party cohorts were arguing in the lobby millings, those invited to the conference were chiefly men who appeared to be opposed to leaving the Republican column.

Among Those Present
Among the Leaguers present were A. G. Sorlie, candidate for Governor; T. H. H. Thoresen, defeated for Attorney-General; W. J. Church, defeated for Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor; L. L. Stair, former prison warden; Kristian Holl of Wildrose; J. W. Hempel of Sheridan county; H. B. French of Bowman; John E. Pfeiffer of Amidon; J. A. Gray of Lisbon; William Lemke of Fargo; Mrs. McGovern and O. A. Hall of Fargo; Mrs. Howard Wood, Mrs. C. A. Fisher and Mrs. Bailey, prominent in the Women's Nonpartisan League; Gerald Nye of Cooperstown; Herman Hardt of Napoleon; Stephen Terhorst and Dell Patterson of Donnybrook; F. A. ## MARITAL TROUBLES OF PEGGY JOYCE AGAIN BROUGHT INTO COURTS

Count Morner, Her Husband, Charged Her With Attempting to Commercialize His Title on the Stage—She Files a Counter Bill For Separation

The North Dakota State Bar Association's meeting date in Jamestown this year will be October 15, according to R. E. Wenzel, secretary. The date has been fixed in accord with the desire of R. E. L. Sauer of Dallas, Texas, immediate past president of the American Bar Association, and former Governor Charles Whitman of New York, who will attend the North Dakota convention.

New York, July 30.—A suit against her for annulment of her marriage, and a counter-suit by her for separation, figured in the affairs yesterday of Countess Gosta Morner, formerly Peggy Hopkins Joyce, show girl, and former wife of two millionaires. The counter-suit also asked for the recovery of $10,000 she alleged she had spent on the Count in their brief married life.

Count Morner last night stated that she had spent no money on him, that he had sacrificed his business for her and finally had filed the suit in desperation after she had not appeared at home for over 24 hours. The Count and Peggy Joyce were married in Atlantic City a few months ago, coming to New York two days later.

Rumors of differences between them had been afloat for some time, and these were confirmed late last night by the Count, who stated that they began at the time of their marriage. He stated that he was disinclined to file a suit for sometime, due to his desire to keep his wife from obtaining notoriety, but that her inclination to capitalize his name and title on the stage, after promising she would not, and her intention of publishing a story that she had supplied him with funds, together with her absence from home over night without communicating with him, made him take this action.

The Countess Morner could not be reached for a statement.

NORTH DAKOTA CORN AND WHEAT REGION SUMMARY
For the week ending July 29. The weather during the week was favorable and all crops made rapid advancement. Spring wheat is heading in practically all sections; the early planted is in the dough stage. A few scattered reports of black stem rust have been received, but the crop is too far advanced for much damage. The rye and barley harvest is well under way and oats is heading. Flax is in the blossom or boll stage mostly and the late sown is coming nicely. Pastures and ranges are generally good but need rain in some sections. Corn is growing rapidly, some tasseled, and the crop is mostly clean.

MEETING TO BE FRIDAY

Samuel Gompers Going To Atlantic City Meeting Despite Recent Illness

Washington, July 30.—Labor union adherents of Senators LaFollette and Wheeler, in their campaign for president and vice-president, were preparing today for a trial of strength inside the American Federation of Labor. The executive committee of that organization, meeting Friday at Atlantic City, will lay down the policy to govern the attitude of its subordinate bodies—insofar as these can be governed—in the approaching national contest. Chiefs of several trade union organizations, which already have endorsed the LaFollette-Wheeler ticket, will be on hand at the Atlantic City session.

Expressing confidence that they will be able to procure the endorsement of the central labor body for their candidate despite the past policy of the federation to remain nonpartisan and give endorsement to candidates considered favorable to the organized labor viewpoint, regardless of political affiliations, the LaFollette supporters, several of whom are members of the committee, plan to seek forthwith endorsement for their ticket. Samuel Gompers, the aged president of the Federation, expected to attend in spite of a recent and persisting illness.

GANS' PLEA IS DEFERRED

Parole Board Does Not Take Action in Case

The state board of pardons, in special meeting yesterday afternoon to consider cases deferred from the June meeting, put aside for future action the application of Roland Gans, aged 28, for parole. Gans was sentenced in Fargo, February 7, last to serve 20 years for stealing an automobile.

Strong representations were made to the board in behalf of Gans, by leading citizens of his home town of Joliet, Illinois. Judge A. T. Cole of Fargo, who sentenced Gans, in a letter to the board, took exception to any criticism of the severity of the sentence and opposed parole.

While Gans' case was discussed, it was intimated by board members that it would not be finally disposed of until after the trial of Charles Mauer, charged with the same offense. Mauer is at liberty on bond.

The board granted several paroles and restored citizenship to several paroled from the state penitentiary. It was stated by board members, but names of those paroled were not given out. It was learned the board again deferred the case of Tommy McCall of Minot, serving a life term for murder, for whom strong pleas for clemency have been made.

GOVERNOR OF COLORADO NOT TO MOBILIZE

Won't Order Out the National Guard as Part of National Defense Day

BRYAN CRITICISES HIM

Changed His Mind, Says the War Department, Answering Criticism Made

Loveland, Colorado, July 30.—Declaring he would cooperate with President Coolidge as far as he deems it proper, but declaring unequivocally that he would not order the mobilization of the Colorado National Guard on National Defense Day, September 12, Governor Sweet, in an interview with the Loveland Herald reporter, today went on record in opposition to the idea of the observance of the day.

ANSWER MADE

Washington, July 30.—Governor Charles W. Bryan, of Nebraska, "has drawn rather extraordinary inferences from what seem to be a perfectly clear document," the war department declared, in a statement answering the governor's criticism of the "defense day" program for Sept. 12.

Governor Bryan's statement that he does not favor any plan contemplating mobilization of the civil or industrial resources of the country or anything else that savors of a national holiday devoted to preparation for war drew the reply that such "inferences" are a source of surprise to the war department.

Bryan Changes Mind
The statement asserted that the commanding officer of the seventh corps area on May 31 had expressed his desire "to cooperate with the department to the fullest extent."

President Coolidge earlier in the day made known that he probably would not reply to Governor Bryan. It was declared that the war department considered his recent criticism of those condemning the government's plan for defense day as "unfair" as sufficiently outlining his views. These were stated comprehensively in a letter to Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War last Saturday.

The war department statement declared that such plans as Governor Bryan has authorized for observance of defense day—ordering the assembly of national guard organizations under his control and appointing local committees—"will enable the department to carry out its plan in the state of Nebraska completely."

Civilians Free to Act
Referring to Governor Bryan's previous promise of cooperation, the department statement offered the explanation that the government more recent stand "presumably is due" to the wording of a document issued since then by the corps area commander giving instructions to the reserve officers. In this document, the statement continued, "no reference can be found to mobilization of civilians."

"The nearest approach to this," it added, "is a statement in the document that civilians who volunteer their services for the day will be permitted to parade with national guard and organized reserve organizations in order that the process of mobilization may be simulated. The fact that all participation by civilians in the 'defense test' is purely voluntary has been emphasized in all instructions in regard to the test."

Replying to the description of the program as a "mobilization," the department insisted the only thing asked for was "voluntary cooperation during the ceremonies of the day of those citizens who desire to parade with organizations on the theory that, in case of war, they probably would enlist there."

Between 500 and 800 men had engaged in the fighting during the night.

The list of injured today, following the night's fighting, included five men whose injuries were so serious as to require treatment at hospitals. One was a policeman who was struck on the head with a stone. Three others were suffering from wounds believed to have been caused by a shotgun loaded with buck shot.

Many others are known to have been hurt by clubs, flying stones and other missiles. Two automobiles were partly demolished by showers of stones and missiles.

TESTIMONY OF STATE CLOSED, CALL ALIENIST

First Witness in Effort to Save Boys From Gallows Is Expert on Insanity

PROSECUTION OBJECTS

State Charges With Attempting to Plead Sane and Insane at Same Time

Chicago, July 30.—The big legal fight by attorneys for Nathan Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb, confessed slayers of Robert Franks, to save them from the gallows, broke out in Judge John R. Caverly's court today.

The engagement opened when Robert E. Crowe, states attorney, after resting his own case, sought to shut off all testimony of defense experts relating to the mental responsibilities of the youthful defendants. He maintained that the plea of guilty prevented him from using any state of mind as a mitigation of punishment and with his assistants continued the argument through the morning session, even though Judge Caverly said he would overrule the objection.

The defense told the judge that they had a right to show that mentality had figured in circumstances of the crime, an duty court indicated that he agreed with them.

The judge said, however, no opportunity remained for an offer of insanity as a legal defense, and he would not permit such testimony to be introduced.

When the dispute reached a squabbling stage, Mr. Crowe said to the court: "If you hear evidence as to insanity, and then sentence these men to life imprisonment and they appeal to the supreme court, I will confess error."

"I don't care what you gentlemen do with this case when I get through with it," retorted the judge.

Thomas Marshall, indictment expert for the states attorney, remarked at one stage of the argument that the defense was confusing the court.

"They want to plead insanity and call it mental responsibility," he exclaimed. "You can call it green cheese if you like," retorted Benjamin Bacharach, of the defense counsel.

"No," said Judge Caverly. "It has not been wanted. The court will take a day and a half on this if necessary."

During the argument Judge Caverly declared that the defense would not be permitted to go into evidence of insanity and demanded to know from the state whether it had any authorities that would prevent him from hearing evidence as to state of mind or in mitigation.

Chicago, July 30. (By the A. P.)—The state rested today and the defense started testimony in the hearing which is to determine the punishment of Nathan Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb for the kidnapping and murder of Robert Franks. Frank was the last witness for the state. He testified merely that he took Loeb's confession the night of May 30.

The defense called as its first witness Dr. William Alanson White, superintendent of St. Elizabeth Hospital, Washington, D. C. Judge Caverly overruled an objection by States Attorney Robert E. Crowe to testimony by any defense alienist.

"If your honor gave these defendants a term of years satisfactory to them and their attorneys," argued Mr. Crowe, "I could not appeal and they would not. I insist if the question of insanity is raised it is your Honor's duty to impanel a jury and determine that fact."

Judge Caverly shook his head and said "Overruled," but Mr. Crowe continued on the argument on the legal point he had raised.

After the argument had lasted 90 minutes and gotten back to the state's accusation that the defense was trying to plead both sane and insane at the same time, Walter Bacharach suggested that "an hour and a half had been wasted."

Tule Lake, Ore. Has Flow of Natural Gas
Klamath Falls, Ore., July 30. (A. P.)—Eight vents emitting natural gas have suddenly opened in the dry bed of Tule Lake, 20 miles east of here. Tests by J. D. Howard, a local geologist, show the gas to be of paraffine variety. Flames more than a foot in length, burning with intense heat, are reported to have been obtained in tests. The vents or chimneys range in diameter from six to 30 inches and are several feet deep. Between August 5 and 10 last year water disappeared from eight sections of Tule Lake bed. Howard contends that nature is disproving the statements of some geologists that this area is burnt out by volcanic action. The vents are continuing to drill on the same structure running through the lake bed. All three wells are reported to have shown indications of oil.

GRAIN DEALERS ARE AGAINST MERGER DEAL

Country Elevator Association Would Withhold Indorsement at Present

Des Moines, July 29. The National Farmers Grain Dealers association in which 5,000 grain elevators in the middlewest hold membership, refused to indorse the recently organized in Marketing company of Chicago. The association declared it would continue to withhold its indorsement until the grain merger organization plans were modified to provide that all stock must be held by farmers elevator companies and not by individuals.

The resolution adopted at the close of an all-day session to which none but association members and a few others were admitted was: "We do not favor any terminal marketing proposition of any sort unless all stock in it is held and owned by farmers elevator companies and not by individuals nor do we favor the entering of any farmer into any terminal marketing venture until a sufficient number of other such companies have agreed to affiliate with the venture to insure control by the cooperative elevator companies, or until sufficient capital has been subscribed by such companies to properly finance the venture."

Simultaneously the organization indorsed the plans and purposes of the National Farmers Elevator Commission company now being promoted by the Farmers Elevator companies of Illinois and Iowa and commended it to all farmers elevator organizations tributary to the Chicago market.

Failure to recognize officially the Chicago merger plan was predicted, according to John E. Gustafson, president of the association, upon the contention that "Chicago grain men are telling the farmer what to do."

The men blew open the outer door with nitro-glycerine and pried open the inner door and deposit boxes containing the cash. This robbery makes the second early morning attempt at the local station recently, the safe having been chiseled open on the morning of May 18.

Several people in the neighborhood of the oil station reported that

A TEST OF YEARS

Is the Experience of This Bismarck Resident

Are you miserable with an aching back? Feel tired, nervous and run down? Do you have daily headaches, dizzy spells and annoying urinary disorders? Then why not take the advice of a Bismarck resident who suffered as you do and found lasting relief by using Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Here is a Bismarck case that the years haven't changed. Why not profit by it?

Mrs. H. Steinmetz, 113 Second St. says: "I used a couple of boxes of Doan's Pills, from the Lenhart Drug Co., and they cured me of a severe dull aching through the small of my back. I had been annoyed for some time with a lameness and soreness through my loins and a tired and languid feeling and got no relief until I used Doan's Pills. I haven't had backache and my kidneys have been healthy since."

NINE YEARS LATER, Mrs. Steinmetz said: "The cure Doan's Pills made for me is permanent."

This photograph was taken at the European nations came together to discuss the Dawes report. It is probably the most important diplomatic conference since the Peace Treaty.

An envelope containing $150 in silver was overlooked by the thieves and was found lying on the floor by the managers this morning.

Age of Alligators

The Department of Agriculture says that the age of an alligator can only be determined by one who has had experience with these reptiles. Alligators grow very slowly, and it is estimated that at fifteen years of age they are only two feet long; therefore, a 12 footer may reasonably be presumed to be seventy-five years of age. The rate of growth varies with animals in their wild state and those kept in captivity, and it is also governed by the amount as well as the type of food given.

11-YEAR-OLD FARMERETTE RUNS 25-ACRE FARM DOING ALL THE CHORES—AND MAKES IT PAY!

Virjan Brown, 11-year-old school girl of Rye Beach, N. H., has very little time for play this summer. She is managing a 25-acre farm and doing much of the farm work. As the pictures show, she drives the hay-wagon and does the milking. In fact, she milks a six cows a day, no small task in itself. She also helps with the harvesting and does other chores. She is making the farm pay. In winter she goes to school at Portsmouth and will be in the eighth grade next year.

Do Away With Mosquito and Malaria Vanishes

It is estimated that the deaths annually from malaria number some two millions and this figure may probably be multiplied by two or three hundred if we would arrive at the total number of people in the world affected by the complaint.

Malaria is mainly a disease of the tropics, and is caused by a minute parasite in the blood. The parasite in one malaria patient may number anything from one hundred to a thousand millions. In many cases there are more parasites than there are people on the earth, and for ages it was believed that malaria and malaria were in some way connected.

Sir Ronald Ross discovered that it was not the marsh, but the mosquito which bred in the marsh which was the originator of the disease, and he declares that the parasite of malaria is, to the mosquito which carries it, as a dime would be to a hippopotamus.

When a disease-carrying mosquito bites it injects a saliva in which are the malaria parasites. These are carried into the human circulatory system and so throughout the body.

The cure for malaria is quinine, but the prevention of malaria is the destruction of the mosquito in which it breeds.

Pigs Make Faithful Guardians of Sheep

In this country one seldom says anything kind about pigs. Yet they are highly esteemed in other parts of the world, says London Answers.

In the Apennines they are used to guard sheep. One man in each village acts as shepherd to the community, and is allowed a sheep pig to assist him when the animals are out at pasture. The man's task is an easy one—he may amuse himself by playing the flute or he may even sleep for a few hours while the pig faithfully guards the flock. In the evening the same trustworthy guardian sedulously singles out the sheep belonging to this house or that, and never makes a mistake.

Where truffles grow pigs are used to find and root them up. If carefully trained a pig will keep for his master all the truffles he up roots.

In Ireland, of course, the pig's merits have always been recognized. There he is the "gentleman that pays the rent."

Schools in Early Days

The first schools were started in the early history of mankind. Schools were first held out of doors and the teaching was conducted orally, similar to the Hindu Brahman schools. Among the Hebrews the laws were expounded by oral teaching from the porches of the temples. The amount of instruction greatly increased from the mere oral teaching of the law until it involved letters and arithmetic. Among the Spartans the education was almost entirely along lines. Elementary schools became common after the Christian era and in 64 A. D. they were made obligatory. In Athens nearly all of the schools were private, teaching music and literature, reading, writing, arithmetic, geography and drawing. In early Rome the schools taught reading and writing and sometimes arithmetic.

Famous Old Church

This year sees the three hundred and sixty-fourth anniversary of the demolition of the magnificent Church of St. John at Perth, the restoration of which is now contemplated.

This is without doubt one of the most interesting churches in Scotland, says the Weekly Edinburgh Scotsman. Tradition ascribes its foundation to the Picts, but, whoever founded it, it is one of the earliest stone churches built in the country; and, in the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries, as evidenced both by ancient documents and by the surviving remnants of the edifice of that time, it was magnificent and extensive. The monk of Dunfermline, to whom it was granted, allowed it to fall into disrepair—a state of affairs which Robert the Bruce set about remedying, but the restoration was stayed by his death.

Meaning of "Dickens"

"Dickens" is an interjectional expression signifying astonishment, impatience and irritation. It is usually used with words of interrogation such as what, where, how and why. The name has nothing to do with Charles Dickens. It was used by Shakespeare over two centuries before Dickens was born. In "Merry Wives of Windsor" Mrs. Page says: "I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of." "Dickens" is believed to be a euphemism of deuce or devil, which have the same initial letter.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Among the side shows there was a collection of "franks"—armless wonders, living skeletons, fat women and so forth, according to a story told by Charles B. Cochran. About the best draw of the lot was the bearded lady. One day the regular attendant who collected the admission money was temporarily absent, his place being taken by a little girl. A gentleman who had been deeply interested in this particular freak of nature remarked casually to the child as he was passing out: "I suppose, my dear, that the lady inside is your mother?"

"Oh, no, sir!" the little girl replied, momentarily taken off her guard by the unexpected query. "She's my dad!"

KIWANIS AND ROTARY CLUBS MEET JOINTLY

Two Service Clubs of City Join in Annual Weekly Luncheon at McKenzie

MEMBERS HEAR TALKS

The Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, with more than 100 present, joined in a noon luncheon and meeting to-day in the main dining room of the McKenzie Hotel. Dr. V. J. LaRosa, president of the Rotary club, presided at the session.

"The History of Rotary and Its Ideals" was the subject of a talk by C. L. Young. He emphasized the improvement in business ethics during the last 10 years and stated that he believes the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs, through their activities and their ideals, had helped much to bring about a higher plane of business ethics.

J. J. MacLeod reviewed the Boy Scout Camp at Lake Carlyle, Saskatchewan, told of the Kiwanis trips on the Heart River, and the plans for the work through August and September.

Judge L. E. Birdzell, president of the Kiwanis club, was introduced by E. J. Taylor. Judge Birdzell spoke on "The Disputed Presidential Election and How It Was Settled." He gave his auditors a clear, concisely worded picture of the Alben-Hayes controversy and illuminated a subject which he stated was obscurely and scantily treated in school histories. The peaceful acceptance of the outcome of the dispute by the American public marked the greatest forward step toward the perpetuity of the Republic, Judge Birdzell said.

Guests were Clyde Bonham, L. R. Baird, Rotarian of Dickinson and D. S. McDonald, Rotarian of Superior, Wisconsin.

Many songs were sung, including the song the Bismarck Kiwanians plan to sing at the Kiwanis district convention at Chisholm.

Young People Who Abandoned Baby Repentant

St. Paul, July 30.—The cases of Eva and Clarence Epton of Minnesota, 17 and 19 years old, respectively, charged with abandoning their baby, went over for a week yesterday when they pleaded guilty in police court, waived examination and were bound over to the district court.

The young people have declared their intention of trying to regain possession of their child and have sold the automobile which they had bought on the installment plan when their baby was abandoned. When their case comes up next week it was said, effort will be made to have the charge changed to a less serious one of non-support.

BLACK RUST NEAR POLLOCK

Supt. Derrick Reports Finding It in Wheat There

S. W. Derrick, superintendent of the Missouri River division of the Sioux, telegraphing his headquarters from Pollock, South Dakota, reported the discovery of black rust in wheat.

The wheat, he said, was three to four feet high, and would make 25 to 30 bushels an acre if untouched by rust or hail. Early wheat there, he said, is now in the milk stage. He expressed belief early wheat had a good chance to pull through in spite of rust.

The entire Missouri River division has been canvassed, and there are no other reports of black rust.

WHEN ONE-CROP SYSTEM FAILS

Mixed Farming Wins in Ryder-Roseglan District of North Dakota

A lesson in profitable farming methods comes to the farmers of prairie lands out of the Ryder-Roseglan district of Ward and McLean Counties, in western North Dakota. It is a message of practical farm experience achieved under conditions similar to those under which prairie farmers all over the Northwest are working.

To those who attended a tour of the farms of the Ryder-Roseglan district June 27, it was a most simple lesson to understand. There it was before their eyes, a demonstration of practical farming. There, also, were the farmers who owned and worked the farms, ready to answer all questions. More than 500 farmers and business men of Ward, McKenzie Counties took part in this tour.

The Ryder-Roseglan district, which is one of the most prosperous, most truly diversified districts of North Dakota, boasts a varied system of cropping which produces a variety of feeds for all kinds of livestock. Alfalfa, sweet clover, corn, flax, wheat, dairy cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry all play an important part in the farming system of that locality.

The story of success on these farms is a story of struggle—a real battle to make farms out of the prairies and to work out a profitable system of farming. Take for example, the experiences of Ole Lunden. He was a homesteader. Through a mistake in fulfilling the homestead laws, he lost his homestead. He found himself without a cent—he had nothing except his physical strength, health, and lots of luck.

Cows and Alfalfa
That was in 1914. He bought an 80-acre tract and two scrub cows and a crop-payment plan, got married, and went to farming. One of his neighbors had a purebred Holstein bull. Mr. Lunden made it a point to breed his cows to this bull until he was able to buy a purebred Holstein sire of his own.

He now has 26 grade Holsteins, including calves and heifers. He is milking 12 cows and selling his cream at the cooperative cream station at Ryder. Last year, the sale of butterfat averaged $110 per cow. He now has his third purebred Holstein bull, and his herd shows the results of 10 years of breeding toward improved dairy type and higher milk production.

A few years ago, Mr. Lunden bought another quarter-section and is now farming 240 acres. He has a registered 50-acre field of Grimm alfalfa, and has sold $1,200 worth of seed from this field, besides getting a good supply of hay.

John Snippen is another farmer of this district who made a start with little or nothing and since 1916, by keeping sheep, he has made steady progress toward prosperity. Last year he sold $3,500 worth of lambs, wool and sheep. Because of his low feed and labor costs, they netted him a large profit. He feeds out straw, wheat straw and screenings to his sheep, changing from oat straw to wheat straw to give variety to the feed. The only time when he feeds grain is in the period starting six weeks before lambing time, at which time he feeds oats to his ewes. He sells most of the grain from his 600-acre farm for cash. He keeps just one hired man the year around.

Mr. Snippen has 190 acres of sweet clover in sheep pasture this year.

farm sown to flax and oats after heeding pasture have shown increased yields over those not pastured.

"By cleaning up the weeds, 100 head of sheep will pay for themselves on a half-section farm, even if they do not bring in a cent of cash return."

Mr. Snippen has 300 ewes, which are a cross between western Merinos and Shropshires. He has 290 lambs of this year's crop on hand. The wool clip last year brought a return of $3.50 per head. He sold his lambs last year at an average of six dollars per head, bringing a net return per ewe of about $0.50. The sale of wool and lambs last year amounted to $2,400, and by selling off some of his older sheep, he brought the total income from his sheep up to $3,500 last year.

James A. Shea, of this same neighborhood, has also been successful with sheep.

One of the fine things about this tour was the choice of different kinds of farms which were visited. There was the farm of Ole Lunden, just south of Ryder. Mr. Hanson is a Duroc Jersey breeder. He recently started to build up a herd of Guernsey cattle. He has a small herd of grade and purebred cows and has just bought a good purebred Guernsey bull to head his herd. Then there was the farm of Paul Kolden, who has grade Shorthorns and Holsteins, headed by a purebred Holstein sire. He has Poland China hogs, which he pastures on alfalfa and sweet clover pasture, thereby keeping down his production costs.

The farms of Hans and John Lunden, brothers, and that of Peter Kolden, are splendid examples of improved farms, with nice groves and fine, well-equipped homes and farm buildings, such as one finds more often on well-established farms in older farming sections. These farmers have farmed in that district for more than 20 years. They report greatly increased grain yields following sweet clover, alfalfa and cultivated crops.

REAL MIXED FARMING
There is a 160-acre alfalfa field on the farm of John Lunden. Hans Lunden has 160 acres in sweet clover and 120 acres in alfalfa. He has a very good herd of purebred Shorthorn cattle. Starting in 1914 with one purebred Holstein heifer, Peter Kolden has built up a herd of 24 Holsteins. He is milking 14 cows now. His cream checks last year amounted to $1,036. He has Duroc Jersey hogs. His wife made $190 from turkeys last year.

This was the second annual tour which has been held in the Ryder-Roseglan district. The Town Criers' Club of Ryder, working with John Husby, county agent of Ward County and A. L. Norling, county agent of McLean County, arranged this tour. The Town Criers' Committee in charge of the tour was composed of E. E. Fredeen, Paul Rode, George Wortzler, L. S. Officer, A. J. Granum, Peter Kolden, C. A. Olsen, and Ole Lunden, and all deserve great credit for their enterprise and management. The tourists expressed wonder and delight at the splendid farms which they saw. These farms carry a message of cheer to the thousands who have lost hope because the one-crop method of farming has failed. These successes in diversification give farmers a new vision and new courage.—Reprinted from The Farmer of St. Paul.

John Snippen and His Flock. Last Year He Sold $3,500 Worth of Lambs, Wool, and Sheep off His North Dakota Farm. His Sheep Help to Keep up the Fertility of His Land, and Keeps Down the Weeds.

He tells how the sheep fertilize his fields and keep down the weeds.

"I had a 40-acre field that was so full of wild oats that I could not raise a crop on it," says Mr. Snippen. "I had it in eye one year, but the wild oats choked it out. The next year I put it into oats. When summer came I saw that it would not make a crop, so I turned the sheep into it. They pastured there all summer. The following spring, I plowed it up and put it into wheat, which went 21 bushels, grading No. 1 hard northern, to the acre. On other fields, prepared in the same way I got just 10 bushels to the acre that same season. Other fields on my buildings his employees occupy here in the capital.

Incidentally a new degree of co-operation between various branches of the government is being exhibited in the installation and plan of operation of these plants.

The Shipping Board, whose offices will be among those heated, has offered to provide a concrete tanker for storing a supply of fuel here in Washington. The Navy Department will chip in by towing this vessel from Pensacola, Fla., where she now lies.

Boilers for the larger heating unit will also be contributed by the Shipping Board from a surplus of marine stock on hand. These were designed for fast war-time liners, but will serve out their days anchored to bed-plates in a prosy dry-land heating plant.

The War Department and Treasury Department have each helped the project along, the former donating pipe lines salvaged from Camp

Maede, the latter turning over equipment purchased for a plant to heat the income tax unit, which it later decided to abandon.

The Roosevelt tradition is to be carried over into this year's presidential campaign, via the personality of "Hell at Marie" Dawes.

Perhaps we shouldn't have put it that way, since the vice presidential running mate of President Coolidge has indicated that he wishes to shed his picturesque sobriquet for a more sober one, better befitting the dignity of a possible vice president. Any way, Dawes and his rambunctious personality are to be painted as of the same general character of those vigorous, strenuous attributes which so endeared "T. R." to the American people.

The "politician with a punch," however, who is most under discussion in Washington these days, is none other than Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas.

Robinson jumped right into the center of the capital's tea-table conversations the other day when in an altercation over golf etiquette, he swung with his fist instead of his mid-iron and knocked Dr. James Mitchell for a dead one. No one claims it was a dub stroke, but Mitchell claims the senator scored on a foul and protested to the club management, exhibiting a black eye as Exhibit A.

The discussions that resulted haven't been equalled in the exclusive Chevy Chase Club circles since Taft tried golf as a weight-reducer.

The Robinson fans said Joe should have used his driver instead of his fist, but the Mitchell adherents held that his fist proved a masher, which no gentleman would use on his first shot.

The upshot of all the talk was that Robinson was expelled from the club. Not because he hit Mitchell, but because he got the club too much talked about!

No Secrets in His Life
A man who had amassed a fortune by his own efforts liked to annoy his wife by telling credulous acquaintances about fictitious early hardships. Placed next to a dowager at dinner, he was sure to tell the following story:

"I never learned to read or write until I was twenty-one. My principal garment up to the age of twelve was a coffee bag. Down in the mountains where I was raised a brand popular in those days was triple X, and you can see a triple X across my shoulders to this day."

MORE CARE SHOWN
Motorists are more careful in crossing railroad tracks, report officials of the Long Island Railroad. This is made after a check on representative railroad crossings.

Use of radio receivers is forbidden in the German occupied areas.

TWO COUNTIES
FOUND WITH NO
MEDICAL HELP

Oliver and Billings Have No
Physicians or Nurses,
Society Reports

Two counties in the state have been discovered, which have no doctors, county physicians or nurses. They are Oliver and Billings. The fact was reported to a meeting of the executive board of North Dakota Tuberculosis Association, in meeting here, by Miss Carrie Haugen, executive secretary.

The traveling clinic maintained by the association has been working in western North Dakota and was visited by Miss Haugen in Billings county last week, preparatory to the hearing clinic had examined people and given minor treatment in several counties, she said, much of the work of the clinic since July being in Oliver and Billings county. Those in charge of the clinic reported these counties without medical aid of any kind.

The tuberculosis association may launch a campaign in the near future for the building of a children's building at the late tuberculosis sanatorium at Dunsmuir, a project resolved upon by the association in the past. The Degree of Honor in the state has offered $4,000 toward a fund for such a building which, it is estimated, would cost $40,000. It is probable that other houses and organizations will be asked to back the association's program for such a building. There now is no special provision for child tuberculosis at the state hospital.

Fargo, July 30.—Dr. I. H. Bailey, 58, 906 Tenth st. S. He had been in failing health for about two years. He became unconscious Sunday morning and never regained consciousness.

AUTO RECORDS ARE BROKEN

More Licenses Put Out in N.
D. Than Last Year

Automobile records in North Dakota continue to be broken as the year progresses. The total number of licenses issued by the motor vehicle registration bureau has reached 107,107 to date, as compared to approximately 101,000 licenses in August 1 of last year. Receipts to and including July 25 are $730,000 25 as compared to $716,691.25 on the same date last year.

It has been necessary for John Tucker, registrar, to order 5,000 additional motor license tags. The bureau had allotted numbers from 50,000 to 115,000 for Ford cars, and up to 49,000 for non-Fords. The Ford numbers having been exhausted it has been necessary to drop back to 15,000 and above for additional Ford licenses. Public officers will be notified so that persons driving Fords with numbers under 50,000 will not be subject to suspicion on that account.

It is estimated that the registration includes about 8,000 new automobiles sold in the state this year.

Is your wife wiser
than you?

If you read only the stock and sporting pages, and your wife is like other women, she is wiser than you. She reads the shopping news.

She likes to hear you jingle money in your pockets. She likes to stretch money to the limit, so she won't have to ask for more. She likes to shop strategically. Know what she does?

Comfortably at home in a cushiony armchair, she scans advertising columns. She compares, judges and selects the goods she desires; maps her route; with least effort and minimum time, goes direct to the planned store and buys.

She obtains what she wants at the lowest price it is offered. She is certain of full satisfaction, for she knows advertised goods live up to their claims. She saves time and steps, and returns sufficiently alert to enjoy new advertisements—and to prepare you an appetizing dinner.

Automobile records in North Dakota continue to be broken as the year progresses. Pathe News Acrop Fable

Is your wife wiser
than you?

If you read only the stock and sporting pages, and your wife is like other women, she is wiser than you. She reads the shopping news.

She likes to hear you jingle money in your pockets. She likes to stretch money to the limit, so she won't have to ask for more. She likes to shop strategically. Know what she does?

Comfortably at home in a cushiony armchair, she scans advertising columns. She compares, judges and selects the goods she desires; maps her route; with least effort and minimum time, goes direct to the planned store and buys.

She obtains what she wants at the lowest price it is offered. She is certain of full satisfaction, for she knows advertised goods live up to their claims. She saves time and steps, and returns sufficiently alert to enjoy new advertisements—and to prepare you an appetizing dinner.

These advertisements are written for your benefit too. Read them. Help her help you save.

WORK WELL DONE

The Agricultural Credit Corporation, which was formed by private capital in the Northwest several months ago at the instance of President Coolidge who urged private interests to step in and help meet the situation while Congress also was being called upon for aid, has about completed its task, in the opinion of C. T. Jaffray, its guiding force. Sixty per cent of the $10,000,000 capital, subscribed by private interests, including many large industrial concerns, was called in. Mr. Jaffray hopes this will be all that is necessary and feels sure that if the crop prospects mature and price levels are maintained, the organization will not need to continue. As originally formed, the credit corporation had a borrowing capacity of $100,000,000.

The corporation during its period of existence has aided many banks through direct and immediate aid, and has aided farmers through arranging to carry their paper for a considerable period. Many closed banks in the Northwest which lacked liquid assets were enabled to reopen. The corporation gave an impetus to diversified farming through placing cows and sheep on farms in one-crop regions of North Dakota and elsewhere.

The promptness with which the corporation acted and the voicing of confidence in the Northwest by leading institutions and citizens who put their money into the corporation with only their confidence in the future of the great region to justify a hope it would be returned in full, had a beneficial effect upon the morale of the region. It did much to encourage many to hang on that were on the verge of quitting. It gave concrete evidence that institutions which had been regarded as cold-blooded had the welfare of the Northwest and its people at heart. Those who made the Agricultural Credit Corporation possible are entitled to the thanks of the people of the Northwest states which it benefited.

WHAT HE FLIES WITH

In the little bedroom of a modest house in San Francisco lies an old mother, bedfast. It has been a long siege of "flu" and of loneliness, too, for husband has to work and there's only a kindly neighbor's little girls to "look in occasionally." But it is not the physical distress, nor the loneliness that hurts the invalid most.

She worries about her married children 'way off in New York City and she knows that they worry about mother; and telegrams at 3 or 4 cents per word are too costly for the poor.

But there comes a Monday evening when husband sits down by the bedside and writes, for his helpless wife, a long letter to their children.

There's mother love in the letter, and cheer to the effect that mother is doing nicely, and affectionate inquiries as to the grandchildren, with some old-fashioned mother's advice on running a family, and all the tender things that mothers have to repeat again and again to those they've borne, worked for and somewhat lost through their little ones growing up.

"John," says the sick woman, "mail it on your way to work tomorrow and they'll be reading it the day after and by Friday I'll get their answer. Be sure, John. It's almost as if I had them here." Then she smiles in happiness, the grip of worry in loneliness leaves her heart, and she sleeps.

The air mail service!

We vision its business advantage almost exclusively. In 32 hours the San Francisco merchant can pour his orders, kicks, his whole soul out to his New York "connections" for 24 cents, and, in 64 hours, get a reply that would clog the wires and cost a small fortune if sent in the old way. Quicker business, cheaper business, more business. Fine stuff! We vision the profit, first thing and strongly.

And hidden in this thing of human progress are such things as the happiness of that old mother who almost feels that she has her children at her bedside, 'though they are thousands of miles away.

The material greatness of man's inventions and enterprises sticks out but their real greatness is in their by-product—their contribution to human happiness. Banker & Son of Francisco explain the details of a big scheme to Morgan & Co. of Wall Street. And a lonely, suffering old mother pours her heart out to her children almost in their presence. Great is the flying postman!

HOT

The thermometer runs up to 149 degrees during a heat wave in Algiers, northern Africa. You'd think the people there would pack up and leave for good. Not so.

Volcanoes erupt and rivers flood regularly, but families living nearby stay on. They flee when disaster comes, but always return to the scene of periodic trouble.

This peculiar weakness explains why the same politicians bunk the populace over and over.

SUGAR-PAPAS

It's the middle-aged men who are taking Boston girls to the seashore, says Henry J. Hunt. He sells tickets to couples bound for the beaches for a day's or evening's outing. He notices lots of young escorts. But "it's surprising how many girls like to go about with men old enough to be their fathers."

The seashore isn't the only place. The economic pinch is getting so tight that young fellows haven't the money.

Eating sugar soaked in perfume is a fad with Middleton (N. Y.) girls, the sweet things.

Radio is becoming very popular in South America and almost any night the fans can hear a revolution in the air.

CONVENTION REFORM

Whatever else the political managers, the political experts and the practical politicians may do, they will no doubt try to take some action that will prevent the recurrence of another such convention as that which has just closed in New York if such a thing be possible.

Political managers are, of course, like other people, somewhat the creatures of circumstances. Perhaps the circumstances of the convention were to some degree foreseen, but could not be forestalled; but, however that may be, they were undoubtedly undesirable both for the party and for the public.

When a national convention marks the ending of a long chapter in the presidential nomination there is likely to be friction and antagonism in it from the fall of the gavel. This is because such a chase is not a chase by the people, but of the people. People, it would appear, are rather inclined to resent the determination of any man to be a party candidate for President whether or no.

Whether the Democratic two-thirds rule should be abrogated will no doubt receive the careful attention of the party leaders. In view of the long record of the National Conventions when it did not seriously delay the result, and when it even, at times, improved the result, it will hardly do to place on it the whole blame for the New York complications.

The unfortunate situation that held the convention in session for more than two weeks was not the result of rules, but of human ambition and human antagonism, and that is something that is pretty hard to regulate either by party laws or party foresight.

With any other convention the finish is generally rather of the pell-mell kind, and the longer the convention is, the worse this condition is.

The delegates are tired, "broke" and want to go home. They are in a state of deliberation and they merely want to finish the job. In this condition almost any man selected by the bosses can be named for Vice-President—the convention's last official duty; or it may be that without the boss's selection the candidate for President, the grounds soft and they've all caved in. Besides we always fill them up partly so Mister Zip doesn't see them.

"I was only fooling, anyway," said Flop. "I didn't mean it. Come on. Here's a good place to dig. Right outside the fence."

And almost before you could say boo the little mole boy began to scratch and dig with his little shovel paws, and disappeared, hide, hair and all, right down into the ground! It didn't take Flop Field Mouse long to follow. The last the Twins saw of him was his long tail. Finally that disappeared, too.

When Flop and Mikey poked their noses out into daylight again under the roller coaster in the park, there stood Mister Zip waiting for them. "Ten cents apiece, please," he grinned, holding out his hand. Flop and Mikey looked sheepish, but they paid it without a word. All their quarrel for nothing, mind you!

FABLES ON HEALTH—DON'T COOP YOURSELF

"Now, don't get yourself imprisoned in a tent. You might just as well stay home in your $810 city apartment," warned the physical instructor when Mrs. Jones was packing up for her vacation.

"Most people think that tenting out is a healthful stunt," he continued. "But most people don't know how to tent out and you have to be careful with tents of the old-fashioned variety."

"Most people treat tents as though they were dog kennels in which to crawl. Unless the weather is stormy the tent flaps should be kept up to allow the freest circulation of air."

"Tents, when entirely closed, allow little or no air to enter and, since you go into the vacation country to get fresh air, why coop yourself up at night?"

"It's far better to use the tent as a storm shelter and sleep out under the sky—there's a kick for you if you've never tried it."

"There are many tents being made now, however, that lend themselves easily to opening and these are preferable to those of ancient vintage."

During the war the French got some new manners. They saw Americans rise and uncover when "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played. They saw the English do the same when "God Save the King" was played.

So Frenchmen now stand at attention when the glorious "Marsellaise" booms out. Going up one better, French audiences have adopted the habit of rising and doffing their hats when they listen to a discourse by their president.

But a very democratic old bachelor is now in the Elysee and he doesn't believe in that kind of homage. The other day when he rose to address an assembly of French newspaper men, they rose. Immediately Gaston Doumergue smilingly bade them sit down.

"Gone are the pouter pigeons of the Elysee," said a grateful reporter who is rather fat. "We now have a simple president."

With all their hatred of the French, the Germans are so conservative that they won't change certain things.

When the King of Denmark was in England recently, one of the first places he visited was an agricultural show. Two-fifths of his own subjects are farmers and they like the idea of their king being also in the business.

So he has become a farmer, a real one. He has become a fan on pig-raising. And he also has model dairy farms.

WHEN YOU COUNT YOUR MONEY

By Albert Apple

Your pocketbook's contents fool you more than you imagine. To realize this fully, we must take a deep plunge into economics. So, taking a deep breath, let's plunge.

The electrical industry is pleased as Punch because it exported 70 million dollars worth of machinery and apparatus from the United States last year, compared with only 25 million dollars worth in 1914.

On the surface, this looks as if exports are nearly three times as much as before the war.

But the gain is largely a hoax, for this reason: Everything costs more than it did in pre-war days. A dollar now buys less than it used to. If we measure "gains" in dollars, therefore, we're apt to get fooled—because the buying power of the dollar has shrunk.

Reduce electrical exports—or any other activity of American business—to terms of pre-war buying power—and the actual physical amount hasn't gained much. It's a price hoax.

Another case is foreign trade. We didn't build up a big foreign trade during the war. We just kidded ourselves into believing we did.

The financial figures, representing the total of our exports, certainly did move ahead by leaps and bounds. But this was just because prices were higher. If you measured our export trade in "physical units" (bushels, bales, tons, etc.) the situation was this: During the war and the boom that followed, exports PHYSICALLY never averaged higher than 16 per cent more than before the war.

The most important things of life are so obvious that few people can see them. There's an old saying, that fishing is always better five miles farther on. Another old saying, about not being able to see a mountain if you're too close to it.

It is perilous for people to ignore these truths. Take a dollar out of your pocket. It is still a dollar, but it buys no more than half, at most, of what it bought before the war. We still call it a dollar, though we should by all rules of common sense call it 50 cents or less.

What counts is not the number of dollars you are paid, but what your dollar will buy. If eggs sold for a cent a dozen, and other commodities similarly low, most of us would work for a dime a day—gladly.

The Tangle

"Since then," I continued, "through a series of peculiar incidents, you know what has happened. Now it's up to you to play the game, just as I played it when you came to me with a confession that was not so innocent."

You must excuse me now, for I must see that everything is made ready for the proper celebration of our happy married state."

As I left the room I heard Sydney Carton's voice in the hallway calling: "Hey, Jack, where are you? I went over to the office and last night you had gone home. Is Leslie ill? Certainly nothing else but illness in the family could have kept you from meeting me at the train. I told you I was coming in this morning. It's just half past eight. You up the amount of that taxi bill?"

I had made my way into the room that we are using for little Jack's nursery. It opens off to Jack's room as well as mine. It never entered my mind, little Marquise, that Jack would not go into the living room to meet Sydney. To my consternation, however, he said:

"Come in here, Syd. Everybody's all right. I confess I forgot that you were coming in today."

Then he raised his voice a little and shouted:

"Sydney's here, Leslie. I did not answer. Instead, I locked the doors of communication."

For instance, one of the most prominent places in Berlin is "Friser Plaza"—Paris Square. It re-raises that name all during the war and it still does.

Then their is the great Prussian "Ordre pour le Merite." Although between both Jack's and my rooms and the nursery.

In a moment or two I heard Jack call Nora and tell her to tell me that Mr. Carton was here. Shortly after Nora informed him she thought I had gone out that night. Prescott had told her she had caught a view of me getting into the elevator.

Just who Mother Prescott had taken me for, I did not know, but I determined to make her word good. I left the house as soon as I could without being seen. I wanted to talk over matters with Ruth.

Before I could do this, however, I heard Jack mention my name to Syd, and then in a torrent of words he told him the whole story.

Evidently Sydney Carton did not say a word until Jack had finished; then I heard in the most contemptuously sarcastic tones, these words: "Jack, I have always known you were a fool, but it never entered my head that you were such an utter damn fool as you have proved yourself to be in the conversation that has just taken place."

"But, Syd, can you not see Leslie has put me in a terrible position? If this matter should get out I would never be able to hold up my head again."

And yet you threatened her, Jack."

"Oh, I didn't mean it; neither does she mean what she said to me."

"I rather think she does," said Syd.

I was able to get out of the room then, and heard no more.

New York, July 30.—The mild-mannered, softest-voiced man I ever met writes about prize-fighters and their mauling pursuits.

He lives at their camp, speaks their language, numbers countless sporting writers of national fame among his friends, and even boxes with a vengeance worthy of a top-notch amateur.

During the war he was an aviator, his companions of that period relating many instances of his daring in flight.

But to talk to him you would classify him as a shy, retiring young blade from some crossroads hamlet where the cheese and cracker salesman is a visiting hero.

He is Dean Snyder and he directed the publicity for the Dempsey-Gibbons affair at Shelby, Mont., which although a stupor, drew-up from a promotion standpoint, received more space in newspapers than any other boxing encounter in history. Snyder was the redeeming feature of Shelby, sporting writers contended.

Snyder is here as the go-between for newspapers and promoters of several coming fights. He was born in Wichita, Kan., where prize fights are seen only in the movies.

New York's aerial police are on the job. Six police seaplanes were ordered out recently. They patrol from sunrise to sunset each day.

They will apprehend planes flying low over New York, search for missing bodies, and patrol water fronts.

Cafe cashiers must be quick witted.

If they are short at the end of a day's business, the shortage is withheld from the weekly stipend. If they are "over," which is seldom, and then not more than a few cents, they keep the difference.

I know one cashier who was short a month's salary plus $65.95 in less than a month. She must pay from her own pocket the losses.

"It is the only way we can handle carelessness," one prominent innkeeper explains.

This happened at the Aquarium. "Where will I find those 'Geffille' fish one hears so much about?" a visitor asked.

The guard was perplexed, but felt he should make some answer.

"Oh," he said, "we don't keep them carp."

Humor and merriment are often found in strange places.

Three young women and a young man were laughing hilariously in the solemn, musty atmosphere of an undertaker's parlor.

I couldn't get the joke but it must have been funny.

Mrs. Zuger Home From Long Trip

Mrs. Alfred Zuger and son Jack returned home last evening after spending two months on the Pacific coast. Mrs. Zuger left here late in May and joined the special to the biennial convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs in Los Angeles at St. Paul. After touring points of interest en route she arrived in Los Angeles early in June, spending two or three weeks in activities connected with that gathering.

After the convention adjourned, she visited friends at Long Beach and Hollywood and saw many of the wonders of Southern California. Going north she stopped three weeks at San Francisco and visited friends at Oakland, Cal. While there she saw much of the surrounding points of interest. Leaving California she visited Portland, Seattle, Tacoma and returned home via Vancouver and the Canadian route stopping at points in the Rockies.

"North Dakota, after weeks in the west, looks like God's country to me," said Mrs. Zuger. "No one who has not seen the parched hills and deserts of the far west can appreciate the green hills here. Coming into the state from the west, I was impressed with its beauty and especially the fresh, green fields and the fine crops. Drought in the far west has burned the hills and the lowlands and it certainly looked good to see this state after being away two months."

Two Kinds of Lace

Lace is not only at the height of its popularity, but there is a tendency to use more than one kind on the same frock. Here is a heavy banding combined with a light open Chantilly variety. They meet on a charming dinner gown of white crepe. The sleeves and the skirt ornament which the model is all but concealing with her hand are made of rows of black velvet ribbon.

EIGHT OUNCES IS PLENTY! Milady's Costume, Without Hat and Shoes, Weighs Half Pound

DRESSING IN EIGHT OUNCES OF CLOTHING. THE DRESS, JUST GOING ON, WEIGHS TWO AND THREE-QUARTER OUNCES. THE MODEL WEIGHED HER COSTUME SO THERE COULD BE NO MISTAKE.

By NEA Service

Pittsburg, Pa., July 30.—No wonder women know how to keep cool!

They can dress, with becoming modesty, in eight ounces of clothing. They can buy the clothing for $26.40.

Unostentatious, unmarred by any doubt it, but it has been put to the test here and proved.

The estimate, of course, excludes hat and shoes, the heaviest items of Milady's summer wardrobe, but even with these added the total weight is just 21 ounces.

The fast-fading corset outweighs the entire ensemble. The costume of 1910 probably weighed four times as much.

Just to show Pittsburg women how to shop for an eight-ounce costime, a Pittsburg girl, accompanied by a safe, young married reporter with two children, was chosen to select the garments.

Here is a leaf from the reporter's notebook:

"Bustier. This is a strong, web-like garment, weighing one-half ounce. The price is $1.50. A rose-bud, which is nearly all the weight, is embroidered in the center."

"Teddy or step-in. This er-garment weighs one and one-half ounces. Price, $1.50, material silk. (Young unmarried men are advised to turn to the sport pages.)"

"Hose. Nothing secret about them. The price is $2.95, material chiffon silk. They conceal nothing and weigh one-half ounce."

Several days before she can be removed to the Crawford home.

The Tug Boat

"I can't stop and play," said the tug boat in the river. "I'm going to have a beautiful morning," said the sailing vessel. "What are you going to do?" the tug boat asked.

"Oh, I'm just going to rock a bit in my river swing. I shall rock to and fro."

"I'm going traveling tomorrow, but today I haven't a thing to do. I shall just rest myself and swing and see what is going on along the river."

"I shall watch the boats pass and I shall listen to all the river talk, for the boats all have their own voices and their own different sounds."

"I so much enjoy the whistling, tooting talk of the river boats. Some have low voices and some have shrill voices."

"Some say: 'Get out of the way. I'm in a great rush.'"

"And others say: 'I'm coming slowly along and I am sure we will pass each other without any harm coming to either of us.'"

"Then there are others who call out: 'Hello, hello, hello' to each other. And still others who say: 'Well, see who I see! There are you. Did you have a good trip?'"

"Ah, I shall have a beautiful day, just enjoying myself and doing nothing."

"I should be glad to join you," the tug boat said. "But really I must be off very soon now."

"I have a good deal of work to do today. I have two screws to drag after me."

"You know how they are! They can't bear to hurry. And I have to keep pulling them along and never give up until I get them where they are supposed to be."

"Well, I must be off now. Good-by, sailing vessel."

"Good-by," the sailing vessel said dreamily.

"That tug boat works too hard," said the sailing vessel. "Now to-day the tug boat should have taken a day off with me."

"Still the tug boat seems to enjoy working so hard and being so busy and making its own way everywhere. It's a good, sturdy, hard worker."

"The tug boat was off now, saying good-by in a rather shrill, business-like voice."

"I would have liked to have talked to sailing vessel," the tug boat said to itself. "But I think I'd not be happy for long being lazy."

"I have such an energetic nature!"

On and on the tug boat went, carrying, pulling, tugging in the two great screws which came along afterward because tug boats simply insist upon it.

They approached a drawbridge later on and tug boat called out in its tug boat fashion something which was meant for:

"Make ready, make ready, we're coming."

And then the man who stood by the drawbridge turned a crank which made the bridge draw open and the center part divided itself so that half went up on one side and half on the other side, and there they stayed, suspended in the air.

For the tug boat and the screws would not have had room if the drawbridge had not done this.

On and on the tug boat went until its work was over.

But when its work was over it was all ready for another job.

For the tug boat didn't believe in leading a lazy life. It wouldn't have been a tug boat had it been lazy.

And back in the river the sailing vessel enjoyed a lazy, beautiful, idle day, sometimes staving quiet and sometimes rocking a bit in its river swinging, swaying, waving fashion.

"We boats are of all kinds certainly," the sailing vessel said to itself.

"And our ways are very different."

Mrs. Zuger Home From Long Trip

Mrs. Alfred Zuger and son Jack returned home last evening after spending two months on the Pacific coast. Mrs. Zuger left here late in May and joined the special to the biennial convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs in Los Angeles at St. Paul. After touring points of interest en route she arrived in Los Angeles early in June, spending two or three weeks in activities connected with that gathering.

After the convention adjourned, she visited friends at Long Beach and Hollywood and saw many of the wonders of Southern California. Going north she stopped three weeks at San Francisco and visited friends at Oakland, Cal. While there she saw much of the surrounding points of interest. Leaving California she visited Portland, Seattle, Tacoma and returned home via Vancouver and the Canadian route stopping at points in the Rockies.

"North Dakota, after weeks in the west, looks like God's country to me," said Mrs. Zuger. "No one who has not seen the parched hills and deserts of the far west can appreciate the green hills here. Coming into the state from the west, I was impressed with its beauty and especially the fresh, green fields and the fine crops. Drought in the far west has burned the hills and the lowlands and it certainly looked good to see this state after being away two months."

GOOD FIRST COURSE Melons make a delicious first course for hot weather that is much preferred to soup. Watermelons or cantaloupe cocktails are made by cutting the melons into cubes and pouring over a dressing made of a tablespoon of lemon or lime juice, a tablespoon of powdered sugar and one teaspoon of finely chopped mint.

The Tug Boat

"I can't stop and play," said the tug boat in the river.

"I'm going to have a beautiful morning," said the sailing vessel. "What are you going to do?" the tug boat asked.

"Oh, I'm just going to rock a bit in my river swing. I shall rock to and fro."

"I'm going traveling tomorrow, but today I haven't a thing to do. I shall just rest myself and swing and see what is going on along the river."

"I shall watch the boats pass and I shall listen to all the river talk, for the boats all have their own voices and their own different sounds."

"I so much enjoy the whistling, tooting talk of the river boats. Some have low voices and some have shrill voices."

"Some say: 'Get out of the way. I'm in a great rush.'"

"And others say: 'I'm coming slowly along and I am sure we will pass each other without any harm coming to either of us.'"

"Then there are others who call out: 'Hello, hello, hello' to each other. And still others who say: 'Well, see who I see! There are you. Did you have a good trip?'"

"Ah, I shall have a beautiful day, just enjoying myself and doing nothing."

"I should be glad to join you," the tug boat said. "But really I must be off very soon now."

"I have a good deal of work to do today. I have two scows to drag after me."

"You know how they are! They can't bear to hurry. And I have to keep pulling them along and never give up until I get them where they are supposed to be."

"Well, I must be off now. Good-by, sailing vessel!"

"Good-by," the sailing vessel said dreamily.

"That tug boat works too hard," said the sailing vessel. "Now to-day the tug boat should have taken a day off with me."

"Still the tug boat seems to enjoy working so hard and being so busy and making its own way everywhere. It's a good, sturdy, hard worker."

"The tug boat was off now, saying good-by in a rather shrill, business-like voice."

"I would have liked to have talked to sailing vessel," the tug boat said to itself. "But I think I'd not be happy for long being lazy."

"I have such an energetic nature,"

On and on the tug boat went, carrying, pulling, tugging at the two great scows which came along afterward because tug boats simply insist upon it.

They approached a drawbridge later on and tug boat called out in its tug boat fashion something which was meant for:

"Make ready, make ready, we're coming!"

And then the man who stood by the drawbridge turned a crank which made the bridge draw open and the center part divided itself so that half went up on one side and half on the other side, and there they stayed, suspended in the air while the tug boat went underneath.

For the tug boat and the scows would not have had room if the drawbridge had not done this.

On and on the tug boat went until its work was over.

But when its work was over it was all ready for another job.

For the tug boat didn't believe in leading a lazy life. It wouldn't have been a tug boat had it been lazy.

And back in the river the sailing vessel enjoyed a lazy, beautiful, idle day, sometimes staying quiet and sometimes rocking a bit in its river swinging, swaying, waving fashion.

"We boats are of all kinds certainly," the sailing vessel said to itself.

"And our ways are very different."

Boasts Two Records

Rev. Arthur J. Benedict of Co-chise, Ariz., boasts of two records which are likely to stand for years to come. He has just completed 50 years of continued service in the Congregational Church. That's one of them. And he is the only surviving member of the six-ear skull which won Amherst College's first victory on the Hudson over 50 years ago. That's the other. Rev. Benedict only recently was awarded his "A" for his skulking prowess.

TUNICS FOR FALL Tunics bordered with fur and worn over very tight underslips are to be fashionable for fall.

BOX COAT A short box coat of black velvet lined with white and with high collar and cuffs is a very effective wrap to wear with a white silk outfit.

SCARF COLLARS Scarf collars that tie loosely at the side in the front, or even down the back are a very feminine finish for gowns of soft crepe de chine or crepe georgette.

NEW FLOUNCES Flounces, circular in shape on one or both sides of the coat are new features seen on the fall coats.

PINEAPPLE EYES There is an inexpensive device on the market for taking the eyes out of pineapples which makes the preparation of this delicious fruit much simpler.

WORK WELL DONE

The Agricultural Credit Corporation, which was formed by private capital in the Northwest several months ago at the instance of President Coolidge who urged private interests to step in and help meet the situation while Congress also was being called upon for aid, has about completed its task, in the opinion of C. T. Jaffray, its guiding force. Sixty per cent of the $10,000,000 capital, subscribed by private interests, including many large industrial concerns, was called in. Mr. Jaffray hopes this will be all that is necessary and feels sure that if the crop prospects mature and price levels are maintained, the organization will not need to continue. As originally formed, the credit corporation had a borrowing capacity of $100,000,000.

The corporation during its first period of existence has aided many banks through direct and immediate aid, and has aided farmers through arranging to carry their paper for a considerable period. Many closed banks in the Northwest which lacked liquid assets were enabled to reopen. The corporation gave an impetus to diversified farming through placing cows and sheep on farms in one-crop regions of North Dakota and elsewhere.

The promptness with which the corporation acted and the voicing of confidence in the Northwest by leading institutions and citizens who put their money into the corporation with only their confidence in the future of the great region to justify a hope it would be returned in full, had a beneficial effect upon the morale of the region. It did much to encourage many to hang on that were on the verge of quitting. It gave concrete evidence that institutions which had been regarded as cold-blooded had the welfare of the Northwest and its people at heart. Those who made the Agricultural Credit Corporation possible are entitled to the thanks of the people of the Northwest states which it benefited.

WHAT HE FLIES WITH

In the little bedroom of a modest house in San Francisco lies an old mother, bedfast. It has been a long siege of "flu" and of loneliness, too, for husband has to work and there's only a kindly neighbor's little girls to "look in occasionally." But it is not the physical distress, nor the loneliness that hurts the invalid most.

She worries about her married children 'way off in New York City and she knows that they worry about mother; and telegrams at 3 or 4 cents per word are too costly for the poor.

But there comes a Monday evening when husband sits down by the bedside and writes, for his helpless wife, a long letter to their children.

There's mother love in the letter, and cheer to the effect that mother is doing nicely, and affectionate inquiries as to the grandchildren, with some old-fashioned mother's advice on running a family, and all the tender things that mothers have to repeat again and again to those they've borne, worked for and somewhat lost through their little ones growing up.

"John," says the sick woman, "mail it on your way to work tomorrow and they'll be reading it the day after and by Friday I'll get their answer. Be sure, John. It's almost as if I had them here." Then she smiles in happiness, the grip of worry in loneliness leaves her heart, and she sleeps.

The air mail service!

We vision its business advantage almost exclusively. In 32 hours the San Francisco merchant can pour his orders, kicks, his whole soul out to his New York "connections" for 24 cents, and, in 64 hours, get a reply that would close the wires and cost a small fortune if sent in the old way. Quicker business, cheaper business, more business. Fine stuff! We vision the profit, first thing and strongly.

And hidden in this thing of human progress are such things as the happiness of that old mother who almost feels that she has her children at her bedside, though they are thousands of miles away.

The material greatness of man's inventions and enterprises sticks out but their real greatness is in their by-product—their contribution to human happiness. Banker & Son of San Francisco explain the details of a big scheme to Morgan & Co. of Wall Street. And a lonely, suffering old mother pours her heart out to her children almost in their presence. Great is the flying postman!

HOT

The thermometer runs up to 149 degrees during a heat wave in Algiers, northern Africa. You'd think the people there would pack up and leave for good. Not so.

Volcanoes erupt and rivers flood regularly, but families living nearby stay on. They flee when disaster comes, but always return to the scene of periodic trouble.

This peculiar weakness explains why the same politicians bunk the populace over and over.

SUGAR-PAPAS

It's the middle-aged men who are taking Boston girls to the seashore, says Henry J. Hunt. He sells tickets to couples bound for the beaches for a day's or evening's outing. He notices lots of young escorts. But "it's surprising how many girls like to go about with men old enough to be their fathers."

The seashore isn't the only place. The economic pinch is getting so tight that young fellows haven't the money.

Eating sugar soaked in perfume is a fad with Middleton (N. Y.) girls, the sweet things.

Radio is becoming very popular in South America and almost any night the fans can hear a revolution in the air.

CONVENTION REFORM

Whatever else the political managers, the political experts and the practical politicians may do, they will no doubt try to take some action that will prevent the recurrence of another such convention as that which has just closed in New York if such a thing be possible.

Political managers are, of course, like other people, somewhat the creatures of circumstances. Perhaps the circumstances of the convention were to some degree foreseen, but could not be forestalled; but, however that may be, they were undoubtedly undesirable both for the party and for the public.

When a national convention marks the ending of a long chase after a presidential nomination there is likely to be friction and antagonism in it from the fall of the gavel. This is because such a chase is not a chase by the people, but of the people. People, it would appear, are either inclined to resign the determination of any man to be a party candidate for President whether or no.

Whether the Democratic two-thirds rule should be abrogated will no doubt receive the careful attention of the party leaders. In view of the long record of Democratic National Conventions when it did not seriously delay the result, and when it even, at times, improved the result, it will hardly do to place on it the whole blame for the New York complications.

The unfortunate situation that held the convention in session for more than two weeks was not the result of rules, but of human ambition and human antagonism, and that is something that is pretty hard to regulate either by party laws or party foresight.

With any other convention the result is generally rather of the well-meal kind, and the longer the convention is, the worse this condition is.

The delegates are tired, "broke" and want to go home. They are not in a deliberative state of mind. They merely want to finish the job. In this condition almost any man selected by the bosses can be named for Vice President of the convention. The last official duty, or it may be that without the bosses' approval some name will be sprung on the convention, and action will be taken with a whoop and a hurrah before anybody knows—or, in fact, anybody cares—what the after effects will be.

This kind of thing has undoubtedly accounted for some of the Vice-Presidents whose names are written permanently in the country's history. The candidate for Vice-President should, of course, be as deliberately and carefully selected as the candidate for President, but "should be" is one thing and delegate weakness is another.

And it is possible that in a convention upshot, protracted, the selection of a presidential candidate will be made in the same temper.

In all the discussion that will no doubt take place in regard to convention conditions and their improvement, the country may learn much about what has been and perhaps more about what should be. Some plan may be devised that will improve conditions.

But whatever is done, it should be constantly borne in mind that reform, when its ramifications reach far foreseen and provided for—or recognized as impossible—is sometimes worse than the old method. Some rather tenacious deadlocks have occurred in Republican National Conventions, where only majority is necessary for a choice. —Indianapolis News.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Sh!" said Nick to Nancy. "Don't make any noise."

The Twins were standing very still under a burdock leaf near the place where Flop Field Mouse lived. Having their magic shoes on they were so little you would have had to look twice to see them yourself.

By and by the front door opened and out came Flop all dressed up in a nice starched shirt and red necktie.

"Now do keep yourself clean, Flop," said his mother. "Every day I start you off to Happy Go Lucky Park clean from the skin out, and you come home looking as though you had been digging in a coal mine."

Flop looked kind of queer when she said that, but all he said was, "All right, Mommy, I'll be careful!" And away he went jingling his 10 pennies in his pocket and whistling. But catching sight of old Mister Owl looking out of his window, he quit whistling and went back into the woods.

The Twins went after him, still going as quietly as they knew how, and they saw Flop stop under the hazel bush where Mikey Mole lived and knock on Mikey's door.

"Hello, Flop," said Mikey, coming out and opening the door behind him. "I'm ready."

Away went the two chums arm in arm through the woods toward Happy Go Lucky Park. Nancy and Nick were behind them. They were not eavesdropping, but they couldn't help hearing what the friends said, for they were talking right out loud.

"What are you going to buy to-day, Flop?" asked Mikey.

"I think I'll get a pink lemonade and ride on the merry-go-round," said Flop. "We'll get the brass ring and get a free ride."

"That's what I'm going to do," said Mikey.

"Copy cat!" cried Flop. "You don't need to do everything I do. Besides if I get the brass ring maybe I'll keep it for a keepsake and then you can't get it and have a free ride."

"All right," said Mikey. "All right, Mister Smarty Longtail. 'Do as you like. But if I don't dig a tunnel for you to crawl through and get into the park for nothing, you'll have to pay your way at the gate and you won't have any money left for either lemonades or merry-go-rounds. So now."

"Oh, I can go through one of our old tunnels," said Flop airily. "No, you can't!" said Mikey. "The grounds soft and they're all caved in. Besides we always fill them up partly so Mister Zip doesn't see them."

"I was only fooling, anyway," said Flop. "I didn't mean it. Come on. Here's a good place to dig. Right outside the fence."

And almost before you could say boo the little mole boy began to scratch and dig with his little shovel and paws, and disappeared, hide, hair and all, right down into the ground! It didn't take Flop Field Mouse long to follow. The last the Twins saw of him was his long tail. Finally that disappeared, too.

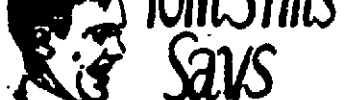

When Flop and Mikey poked their noses out into daylight again under the roller coaster in the park, there stood Mister Zip waiting for them.

"Ten cents, please," he grinned, holding out his hand. Flop and Mikey looked sheepish, but they paid it without a word.

All their quarrel for nothing, mind you!

Most quarrels are. (To Be Continued)

FABLES ON HEALTH
DON'T COOP YOURSELF

"Now, don't get yourself imprisoned in a tent. You might just as well stay home in your $10 city apartment," warned the physical instructor when Mrs. Jones was packing up for her vacation.

"Most people think that tenting out is a healthful stunt," he continued. "But most people don't know how to tent out and you have to be careful with tents of the old-fashioned variety."

"Most people treat tents as though they were dog kennels in which to crawl. Unless the weather is stormy the tent flaps should be kept up to allow the freest circulation of air."

"Tents, when entirely closed, allow little or no air to enter and, since you go into the vacation country to get fresh air, why coop yourself up at night?"

"It's far better to use the tent as a storm shelter and sleep out under the sky—there's a kick for you if you've never tried it."

"There are many tents being made now, however, that lend themselves easily to opening—and these are preferable to those of ancient vintage."

Britisher Would Give Up Seat To A Dog!

By Milton Branner
NEA Service Writer

London, July 30.—The English are a "doggy" people.

Which will explain this scene: Into the crowded subway train walks a prim, well-dressed young woman. She is leading by a chain a great big dog. She and the dog occupy about three seats. As the weather is hot and the dog is hot, that car soon smells like a kennel.

If an American company allowed any of the sort, it would almost create a riot among the perspiring people. But in the English car nary a murmur.

In fact, men and women drop their newspapers, smile at the young woman and begin talking to the dog. He is the center of attention. He becomes the topic of general conversation. And everybody is happy.

When the King of Denmark was in England recently, one of the first places he visited was an agricultural show. Two-fifths of his own subjects are farmers and they like the idea of their king also being in the business.

So he has become a farmer, a real one. He has become a fan on pig-raising. And he also has model dairy farms.

With all their hatred of the French, the Germans are so conservative that they won't change certain things.

The produce from the places he and his queen own is sold not only in Copenhagen but also exported to England and the United States.

During the war the French got some new manners. They saw Americans rise and uncover when "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played. They saw the English do the same when "God Save the King" was played.

So Frenchmen now stand at attention when the glorious "Marselles" booms out. Going one better, French audiences have adopted the habit of rising and doffing their hats when they listen to a discourse by their president.

But a very democratic old bachelor is now in the Elysee and he doesn't believe in that kind of homage. The other day when he rose to address an assembly of French newspaper men, they rose. Immediately Gaston Doumergue smilingly bade them sit down.

"Gone are the pouter pigeons of the Elysee," said a grateful reporter who is rather fat. "We now have a simple president."

For instance, one of the most prominent places in Berlin is "Paris Platz"—Paris Square. It retained that name all during the war and it still does.

Then there is the great Prussian "Ordre pour le Merite." Although the Germans could easily translate this French into German, they don't. Frederick the Great who at one time had a penchant for all things French, founded this order and gave it a French name. And so it will probably remain.

WHEN YOU COUNT YOUR MONEY

By Albert Apple

Your pocketbook's contents fool you more than you imagine. To realize this fully, we must take a deep plunge into economics. So, taking a deep breath, let's plunge.

The electrical industry is pleased as Punch because it exported 70 million dollars worth of machinery and apparatus from the United States last year, compared with only 25 million dollars worth in 1914.

On the surface, this looks as if exports are nearly three times as much as before the war.

But the gain is largely a hoax, for this reason: Everything costs more than it did in pre-war days. A dollar now buys less than it used to. If we measure "gains" in dollars, therefore, we're apt to get fooled—because the buying power of the dollar has shrunk.

Reduce electrical exports—or any other activity of American business—to terms of pre-war buying power—and the actual physical amount hasn't gained much. It's a price hoax.

Another case is foreign trade. We didn't build up a big foreign trade during the war. We just kidded ourselves into believing we did.

The financial figures, representing the total of our exports, certainly did move ahead by leaps and bounds. But this was just because prices were higher. If you measured our export trade in "physical units" (bushels, bales, tons, etc.) the situation was this: During the war and the boom that followed, exports PHYSICALLY never averaged higher than 16 per cent more than before the war.

The most important things of life are so obvious that few people can see them. There's an old saying, that fishing is always better five miles farther on. Another old saying, about not being able to see a mountain if you're too close to it.

It is perilous for people to ignore these truths. Take a dollar out of your pocket. It is still a dollar, but it buys no more than half, at most, of what it bought before the war. We still call it a dollar, though we should by all rules of common sense call it 50 cents or less.

What counts is not the number of dollars you are paid, but what your dollar will buy. If eggs sold for a cent a dozen, and other commodities similarly low, most of us would work for a dime a day—gladly.

"Since then," I continued, "through a series of peculiar incidents, you know what has happened. Now it's up to you to play the game, just as I played it when you came to me with a confession that was not so innocent."

"You must excuse me now, for I must see that everything is made ready for the proper celebration of our happy married state."

As I left the room I heard Sydney Carton's voice in the hallway calling:

"Hey, Jack, where are you? I went over to the office and that most decorative secretary of yours told me you had gone home. Is Leslie all right? Certainly nothing else but illness in the family could have kept you from meeting me at the train. I told you I was coming in this morning. I'll just have to charge you up the amount of that taxi bill."

I had made my way into the room that we are using for little Jack's nursery. It opens off to Jack's room as well as mine. It never entered my mind, little Marquise, that Jack would not go into the living room to meet Sydney. To my consternation, however, he said:

"Come in here, Syd. Everybody's all right. I confess I forgot that you were coming in today."

Then he raised his voice a little and shouted:

"Sydney's here, Leslie."

I did not answer. Instead, I locked the doors of communication between both Jack's and my rooms and the nursery.

In a moment or two I heard Jack call Nora and tell her to tell me that Mr. Carton was here. Shortly after Nora informed him she thought I had gone out, that Mother Prescott had told her she had caught a view of me getting into the elevator.

Just who Mother Prescott had taken me for, I did not know, but I determined to make her wrong, good, and leave the house as soon as I could without being seen. I wanted to talk over matters with Ruth.

Before I could do this, however, I heard Jack mention my name to Syd, and then in a torrent of words he told him the whole story.

Evidently Sydney Carton did not say a word until Jack had finished; then I heard in the most contemptuously sarcastic tones, these words: "Jack, I have always known you were a fool, but it never entered my head that you were such an utter damn fool as you have proved yourself to me by the conversation that has just taken place!"

"But, Syd, can you not see Leslie has put me in a terrible position? If this matter should get out I would never be able to hold up my head again."

"And yet you threatened her, Jack."

"Oh, I didn't mean it; neither does she mean what she said to me."

"I rather think she does," said Syd.

I was able to get out of the room then, and heard no more.

LESLIE.

YANKEES DRAW OUT AHEAD

Babe Ruth Gets His 32nd Home Run in Game

Chicago, July 30.—The New York Yankees held a two-game lead on the Detroit Tigers, after their victory over the Chicago White Sox by a score of 9 to 4 yesterday. Ruth's thirty-second home run with two on in the fifth sewed the game up for the Yankees. Thurston, White Sox pitcher, was driven out after 10 straight victories.

Detroit fought an uphill battle to beat Philadelphia in the 11th, 4 to 3. Davis blanked Boston, 3 to 0, for the St. Louis Browns. Shaute held the Senators to six hits and Cleveland won, 4 to 2.

In the Nationals, Art Nehf featured the Giants' win over St. Louis, 5 to 2. Nehf not only pitched fine ball, but he got the home runs in successive times at bat, in the fourth and fifth, accounting for three of New York's runs.

Cincinnati beat Brooklyn, 12 to 2, with Mays pitching. Chicago beat Philadelphia, 4 to 3. Kromer held Boston to three hits, and Pittsburgh took a victory, 8 to 1.

The Americans Association presented a weird baseball feature for the day. Toledo celebrated "O'Brien Day"—for President Joseph O'Brien of the Toledo Club—and walked Louisville, 22 to 1.

WHITE SOX PITCHING FIND WANTS TO GO BACK TO DEAR OLD TEXAS

George Connolly of the White Sox doesn't care for big league fame. George wants to go back to the minors where everybody calls him "BIG GEORGE."

By NEA Service

Chicago, July 30.—In pitcher George "Sarge" Connolly the Chicago White Sox have not only a great twirling prospect but a most unique character.

With every chance to become a big league star, Connolly doesn't get the slightest thrill because he is in the big show.

"Send me back to Texas, to good Galveston town," is Connolly's favorite song, words and music by the same Mr. Connolly.

Has Earmarks of Star. Connolly has already proved that he is of big league caliber. He needs only a little more seasoning to make him a finished pitcher, a consistent winner.

It would seem that a "bushier" could ask no more, but Connolly is far from satisfied. Here is his line of reasoning:

"This big league stuff is all right but I'll take the small towns. When I go out to pitch for the Sox the first thing I hear the fans say, 'Who is that bushier?'"

"In the Texas League, where I played last season, it was always

"There goes Connolly. He's tough to beat."

"When I walk down State street or Michigan avenue in Chicago I don't get a rise out of the thousands who pass me."

"Now in Texas it was different. I had friends in every town in the circuit, and when I walked down the street lots of people spoke to me just as if I was a regular human being."

"Pay day is the one happy day in the majors. Every day was Christmas in the Texas League."

Misses His Old Friends. "In the big league you have to learn the deaf and dumb language so you can talk to yourself. In the Texas circuit it was just like being on a lecture tour."

Last season with Galveston, that finished seventh in an eight-club circuit, Connolly won 16 and lost only 9 games, a most remarkable record with a near tailender.

Connolly was a star in the Texas League. He is a big husky right-hander and may some day win such fame as a big leaguer that when he walks down State street the fans will make as much of a fuss over him as they did in Galveston.

LEFT-HANDED 'MATTY' SLUMPS WHEN HITTERS WAIT HIM OUT

By Billy Evans
Southpaw Herb Pruett of the St. Louis Browns, occupies a unique position in major league ball.

The possessor of the most deceptive delivery in the American League, possibly in either league, Pruett is unable to win a regular berth.

Christy Mathewson made the fade-away delivery famous. Other pitchers have used it to advantage among them Pruett.

Few southpaws have ever used such a style delivery, possibly that is why it is so effective with Pruett. The fade-away to major league players is just what the name implies. The ball comes up to the batsman in a leisurely manner and then literally seems to fade away.

This type delivery is accomplished best with just ordinary speed. Properly timed, the ball drops away from the batsman as it reaches the plate, much after the manner of a spitball.

Pruett lacks Fast Ball. Slight of stature, Pruett lacks a fast ball that is up to the major league standard. His curve ball is fair. Therefore he is compelled to rely almost entirely on his fade-away.

The fade away to be effective must be well pitched. When broken over the heart of the plate it is not nearly so deceptive as when the pitcher works the corners.

"The fade-away looks easy to hit. The batsman impatient to knock the ball out of the lot, swings lustily. That method of hitting works right into the hands of the fade-away artist."

In perhaps 50 per cent of the cases the fade-away, properly pitched is a ball if the batsman can refrain from swinging at it.

Pruett is Ruth's Jinx. Incidentally the constant throwing of such a type ball is mighty hard on the arm. Waiting out the pitcher makes the task doubly difficult.

Lacking a fast ball, Pruett, the possessor of the most deceptive delivery in the majors has found the going very rough. The players invariably wait him out.

"You simply can't hit what you can't see," is the comment that Babe Ruth pays Pruett's fade-away.

"When I start swinging at it the old ball seems to vanish in the air." The fact that Pruett struck out Ruth 14 of the first 16 times Babe faced him is proof why the home-run king has so much respect for the slender southpaw.

Give Pruett a fast ball like Walter Johnson and he would be practically unbeatable.

Billy Evans Says

Many star ball players do not take the full advantage of their possibilities.

Often speed merchants going down to first are poor baserunners after they reach the initial sack.

This usually is due to the fact that they lack the knack of getting a big lead, breaking with the pike. Failure to perfect a deceptive slide is also a handicap.

Certain pitchers with great natural ability throw caution to the wind and try to win through sheer power rather than mixing a little thought with their pitching.

All of which prepares the way for the theme of this story, the doings of Babe Ruth. It deals with Ruth the bunter rather than Ruth the slugger.

Due to the fact that Ruth is regarded as a right field hitter, the infielders assume a peculiar defensive style in playing for Ruth.

The first baseman is well on the right field foul line, the second baseman shifts almost to the spot of the first sacker, the shortstop stands near second, while the third sacker is well on the way to short.

The outfielder is expected to keep the ball inside to Ruth in order that the defense may get the proper break.

With the third baseman playing deep and well over to short, the situation is made to order for a bunt by Ruth, if he can lay the ball down the third base line.

Incidentally any fly to left field that is short is certain to fall safe.

For several years Ruth has faced just such a situation, an infield defense all out of position to handle a bunt.

Occasionally Ruth would try to lay down a bunt, failing to do so, would go back to his slugging swing.

This season the bunt has become as much a part of the Ruth batting system as the home-run swing. I have already seen him beat out at least a dozen perfectly placed bunts this year.

I have often wondered why more players, noted for their hard hitting ability, didn't go in for the bunt. It is dangerous to play close for such players. With the third baseman back, most any good bunt is a base hit.

In golf the sinking of a long putt carries none of the thrill that goes with a long ball from the tee.

No doubt a well placed bunt lacks the appeal to the slugger that the home-run drive has.

That possibly explains why so few of the hard hitters go in for the bunting game.

MANDAN NEWS

CONDUCTOR HURT

John Hunke of this city, Northern Pacific conductor, is on an enforced lay-off due to injuries received Saturday while riding on the rear end of an engine tender, he slipped and fell to the tracks. One of his elbows was severely bruised and cut and he sustained painful bruises on his legs. Had the engine been pulling cars he probably would have been ground to death, but the engine was detached and running down a switching track at the time.

60 PERCENT ASSESSMENT

Members of the Mandan Round-up committee after a close study of all accounts and bills determined that a 60 percent assessment on the amounts guaranteed by business and professional men prior to the big show would be necessary in order to clear up the outstanding indebtedness. The total deficit is around $2,500 and while the guarantees were slightly less than $5,000.

DRIVER EXONORATED

The coroner's jury empaneled in the Carl Winbauer case following an inquest held before Coroner J. K. Kennelly and in which State's Attorney L. H. Connolly examined the witnesses, found "that deceased met his death by being struck by an automobile x x" and "that the accident was entirely unavoidable and we hereby exonerate Martin Mossbrucker from all blame in connection with said accident." The jury was composed of E. A. Ketter, Geo. A. Dailey and Chas. Toman, Jr.

BADLY BURNED

Miss Ervinae Freud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Freud, 203 Tenth Ave. N. W., employed as a cream tester at the Mandan Creamery & Produce company is a patient in the Mandan hospital suffering from severe burns from acid sustained in an accident at the plant late Monday afternoon.

While at her work she accidentally knocked over with her elbow a bottle of sulphuric acid used in testing and a large quantity spattered onto and saturated her clothing. She was rushed to the office of a physician who found the acid had eaten through her clothes and into the flesh of her legs. Lotions to counteract the acid were applied and she was taken to the hospital for treatment.

SCHAFF CELEBRATES

A large number of friends from Mandan and Solon and in the surrounding neighborhood were joyfully entertained at the Jacob Schaff home at Odense on Sunday afternoon and evening. A dance was held and the general topic of discussion was the joy of everyone over the splendid crops and the bountiful harvest in prospect. Mr. Schaff started developing his splendid farm 32 miles south of the city just 24 years ago.

John Ainsley Master Thief of Arthur Somers Roche

Copyright 1924. NEA Service Inc.

The Club of One-eyed Men

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The was left John Ainsley, a man of education and breeding, unfit for work. He became a master thief. "To prey upon thieves, that shall be my career," he decides. "For if a thief is robbed, where may he look for redress?"

Ainsley visits the Jardin des Nymphes in Paris with two American acquaintances. A tall, white-haired man is pointed out to him as the White Eagle. The White Eagle appears, is a brilliant crook who never has fallen into the clutches of the law. The White Eagle is in the company of a gross, vulgar-looking man and woman. Ainsley suspects that the White Eagle is manipulating a swindle. He finds out the names of the man and woman then leaves his friends and returns to his apartment.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

I find that one thinks better in bed than any other place. Undressed, then, with cigarette on a stand beside me, I pondered the strange relationship which I had seen evidenced tonight.

What was the basis of the acquaintance between the White Eagle, a notorious though unpunished criminal, and Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Higgins, of Cincinnati, Ohio?

I wondered that I had not recognized the Higginses at first glance. Still, the photographs of them, which had appeared in the American and European press, had evidently been retouched to a degree. And if I had not instantly recognized the faces, I paid proper tribute to the Higgins glory by immediately identifying their names.

Who in the newspaper reading world had not heard of Josiah Higgins, who had been a multimillionaire before the war and who was now popularly reputed to be worth at least a billion? Statisticians had estimated how many times his fortune, if reduced to dollar bills, would girdle the globe, how many times it would rebuild the Pyramids, if reduced to silver coins. And other statisticians had solemnly affirmed that it cost thirty thousand dollars to dress Mrs. Higgins for breakfast, and at least a million and a quarter properly to clothe and ornament her for dinner.

Their extravagance had become a matter of international awe. Also, the queer parsimony that accompanied their extravagance was known to all the world. Higgins proudly boasted that he never gave a dollar to charity, and that he never lent money. They tipped outrageously, but Higgins boggled with his workmen, and was probably the most cordially hated employer in America.

They had assailed the gates of fashion in New York, and their rebuffs had become historic. They had failed to impress Mayfair and the Faubourgs as well as Fifth Avenue, but they did not lack for satellites. They were in a fair way to ward creating a fashionable society of their own, if fashion be judged, as it frequently is, by the amount of newspaper space accorded it.

And this couple talked confidentially with such a person as the White Eagle! The thought of black-mail entered my mind, but I dismissed it at once. If the White Eagle had been threatening the millionaire, the manner of such of them would have been patently of strain. No, they had been talking business.

What business? What possible business could exist between the White Eagle and Josiah Higgins? If Higgins had had a son or daughter who could have become entangled in some underworld affair, I could understand that the White Eagle had been called upon for aid. But the couple were childless.

If Higgins were as foolish as I have guessed at a solution of the problem that puzzled me, the White Eagle was a crook; a crook does only crooked business, whether his partner be honest or otherwise. That is axiomatic. But where in the axiom lay a profit for me?

I tossed upon the bed; I fumed and fretted and smoked a score of cigarettes. Somewhere in this relation between the criminal and the millionaire lay an opportunity for me, if only I had eyes wherewith to see it.

For whatever the relation between Higgins and the White Eagle, it must be something underground, even though I could not guess why the millionaire should descend to such a matter. The White Eagle was a crook; a crook does only crooked business, whether his partner be honest or otherwise. That is axiomatic. But where in the axiom lay a profit for me?

I awoke with a headache; I had slept little, and that little had been interrupted by dreams in which the White Eagle took a fortune from Josiah Higgins, while I looked on powerless to abstract the fortune from the so-called supercrook.

I tried to eat breakfast; but the combination of too much wine and appetite was nervous, restless, and I went for a walk. I crossed to the Left Bank, wandering aimlessly, my mind intent on the puzzle, solution of which I felt meant profit to me, and finally found myself in the neighborhood of the Luxembourg. The walk had cleared my head, and appetite had come to me. I walked on to Foyot's and ordered breakfast. Food put me in a more philosophical frame of mind. After all, I might be deluding myself; Higgins might have made the acquaintance of a notorious crook simply for the sake of the thrill that some people gain from such an acquaintance. At any rate, it did not behoove me to wear out my nerves in imagining probpossible its being handed on to a new generation.

And so it is that through Granger Rough Cut this old-time tobacco secret has virtually been "re-discovered" by the Liggett & Myers Co., and offered more widely to the public.

after a three-year period of quiet "try-out" among the shrewder judges of tobacco.

Although more widespread in the United States, European cigarette smokers are more injurious to trees in the West.

REDISCOVER SECRET, REVIVE TOBACCO MAKE

Although present day pipe smokers do not realize it, they owe an everlasting debt of gratitude to an old-time tobacco man John Wellman by name—for giving them one of the sweetest, coolest tobaccos that ever packed a pipe.

The story of Wellman and his famous tobacco secrets is being told to the public for the first time in a series of unique advertisements now being published by the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., to acquaint smokers with their ever-popular Granger Rough Cut. The story of Granger is this:

It seems that several generations ago (about 1870, to be exact) John Wellman led the field with a secret method of preparing pipe tobacco—to the envy and despair of all rivals. They wondered for years how he did it but never seemed able to solve the riddle. In spite of all their efforts, imitators never even approximated Wellman's perfection, so closely was the process guarded. Smokers, however, never stopped to envy but just smoked and liked and kept on liking the tobacco.

John Wellman, of course, has long since passed on, and his famous secret would have passed on with him, had it not been Liggett & Myers' good fortune to acquire exclusive rights to his prize method and make

John Ainsley Master Thief

Copyright 1924 NEA Service Inc

The Club of One-eyed Men

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The war left John Ainsley, a man of education and breeding, unfit for work. He becomes a master crook. To prey upon thieves, that shall be my career," he decides. "For if a thief is robbed, where may he look for redress?"

Ainsley visits the Jardin des Nymphes in Paris with two American acquaintances. A tall, white-haired man is pointed out to him as the White Eagle. The White Eagle it appears, is a brilliant crook who never has fallen into the clutches of the law. The White Eagle is in the company of a gross, vulgar-looking man and woman. Ainsley suspects that the White Eagle is manipulating a swindle. He finds out the names of the man and woman—then leaves his friends and returns to his apartment.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

I find that one thinks better in bed than any other place. Undressed, then, with cigarettes on a stand beside me, I pondered the strange relationship which I had seen evident tonight.

What was the basis of the acquaintance between the White Eagle, a notorious though unpunished criminal, and Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Higgins, of Cincinnati, Ohio?

I wondered that I had not recognized the Higginses at first glance. Still, the photographs of them, which had appeared in the American and European press, had evidently been retouched to a degree. And if I had not instantly recognized the faces, I paid proper tribute to the Higgins glory by immediately identifying their names.

Who in the newspaper reading world had not heard of Josiah Higgins, who had been a multimillionaire before the war and who was now popularly reputed to be worth at least a billion? Statisticians had estimated how many times his fortune, if reduced to dollar bills, would girdle the globe, how many times it would subvert the pyramids, if reduced to silver coins. And other statisticians had solemnly affirmed that it cost thirty thousand dollars to dress Mrs. Higgins for breakfast, and at least a million and a quarter properly to clothe and ornament her for dinner.

His extravagance had become a matter of international awe. Also, the queer parsimony that accompanied his extravagance was known to all the world. Higgins proudly boasted that he never gave a dollar to charity, and that he never lent money. They tipped out recklessly, but Higgins hagglard with his waiters and his valet, the most cordially hated employer in America.

They had assailed the gates of fashion in New York, and their rebuffs had become historic. They had failed to impress Mayfair and the Faubourgs as well as Fifth Avenue, but they did win for themselves a reputation for being set apart. They were in a fair way toward creating a fashionable society of their own, if fashion be judged, as it frequently is, by the amount of newspaper space accorded it.

And this couple talked confidentially with such a person as the White Eagle. The thought of black-mail entered my mind, but I dismissed it at once. If the White Eagle had been threatening the millionaire, the manner of each of them would have partaken of strain. No, they had been talking business.

What business? What possible business could exist between the White Eagle and Josiah Higgins? If Higgins had had a son or daughter who could have become entangled in some underworld affair, I could understand that the White Eagle had been called upon for aid. But the couple were childless.

If Higgins were as foolish as he was unadmirable, I could have guessed at a solution of the problem that puzzled me. I could have imagined that the White Eagle was surreptitiously disposing of stolen goods to the millionaire. But Higgins was too sane to indulge in that sort of shady barter, if he were not too honest.

I tossed upon the bed; I fumed and fretted and smoked a score of cigarettes. Somewhere in this relation between the criminal and the millionaire lay an opportunity for me, if only I had eyes wherewith to see it.

For whatever the relation between Higgins and the White Eagle, it must be something underhanded, even though I could not guess why the millionaire should descend to such a matter. The White Eagle was a crook; a crook does only crooked business, whether his partner be honest or otherwise. That is axiomatic. But where in the axiom lay a profit for me?

I awoke with a headache; I had slept little, and that little had been interrupted by dreams in which the White Eagle took a fortune from Josiah Higgins, while I looked on powerless to abstract the fortune from the so-called supercrook.

I tried to eat breakfast; but the combination of too much wine and too little sleep had killed by appetite. I was nervous, restless, and so I went for a walk. I crossed to the park, wandering aimlessly, my mind intent on the puzzle, solution of which I felt meant profit to me, and finally found myself in the neighborhood of the Luxembourg. The walk had cleared my head, and appetite had come to me. I walked on to Foyot's and ordered breakfast. Food put me in a more philosophical frame of mind. After all, I might be deluding myself; Higgins might have made the acquaintance of a notorious crook simply for the sake of the thrill that some people gain from such an acquaintance. At any rate, it did not behoove me to wear out my nerves in imagining probpossible its being handed on to a new generation.

And so it is that through Granger Rough Cut this old-time tobacco secret has virtually been "re-discovered," revived by Liggett & Myers and offered more widely to the public.

after a three-year period of quiet "try-out" among the shrewder judges of tobacco.

Although more widespread in the east, the European elm scale is more injurious to trees in the west.

EXPECT CREDIT BODY SOON TO END BUSINESS

Most of Work Apparently Is Accomplished, Announcement of Jaffray

Minneapolis, Minn., July 30.—The Agricultural Credit Corporation which was organized with a capital stock of $10,000,000 to tide the north-west over a temporary emergency, will complete its chief work in 20 days and meet the need for which it was created, in the opinion of C. T. Jaffray, based on the present condition of crops and the prevailing prices.

Mr. Jaffray said a marked drop in pressure calls for aid from the corporation had developed in the last month.

He said: "The corporation has given direct and immediate aid to a large number of banks and has benefited a large number of farmers."

In addition to the closed banks already reopened, many more will reopen soon when the crop and the price for it are assured.

The general sentiment of the northwest is greatly improved and has a part in the material drop in pressure on the Agricultural Corporation.

The farm diversification program will be continued. "We have called 60 per cent of our $10,000,000 capital," Mr. Jaffray said. "I had hoped that this would be all that was necessary, and now I feel sure of it if the harvest comes at the present price level."

There is a general improvement in sentiment. There is more confidence in the banks. The reopened banks will be able to continue now on a firmly established basis. A good many more banks will reopen soon when the directors know that present prospects are assured."

U. S. STEEL HAS GOOD YEAR

Judge Gary Is Optimistic Over Business Conditions

New York, July 30.—Despite a perceptible slackening in steel operations in the second quarter of the year, directors of the United States Steel corporation yesterday declared an extra dividend of 50 cents on the common shares for the third successive quarter in addition to the regular dividends of $1.25 a share on the common and $1.75 a share on the preferred stocks.

Total earnings of the corporation amounting to $41,381,039, while almost $9,000,000 below those of the preceding three months, were however about $6,000,000 above preliminary estimates made in the financial district.

Confidence on the business outlook of the country was expressed by E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, after the meeting of the directors.

"I made a statement early in April that I believed that as soon as the presidential election had occurred and at least a month before, we would have good business in this country," Mr. Gary said. "If I were to make a prediction at the present time, I would not change materially what I then said."

16 TRAPPED BY FIRE RESCUED

Minneapolis, July 30.—Sixteen persons trapped on the third floor of a rooming house by a fire which filled halls and stairways with dense smoke, were carried down ladders to safety by firemen about 1:30 a. m. today. One person was overcome by smoke and taken to a hospital and several others were revived by firemen after being carried from their rooms. The fire caused only slight damage to the building.

Edna Purviance Visits Dines In Denver

Denver, July 30.—Edna Purviance, motion picture actress, is in Denver visiting Courtland S. Dines, wealthy Denver oil man, it became known today. Miss Purviance, who was a member of a party in the Dines apartment in Los Angeles last New Year's day, during which Dines was shot and wounded by Horace Greer, a chauffeur of Mable Normand, told newspaper reporters there was no truth in reports in circulation here that she and Dines were to be married.

"Yes, that's right," added Dines, "we haven't even planned an engagement."

Miss Purviance said she had come to Denver for a few days, as the result of the failure of an announced hunting party to leave Salt Lake City on schedule.

"I just had to come over here and visit Courtland," she said. "Courtland and I are very dear friends, and I couldn't be in this vicinity without visiting him."

THEY SAW A REVOLUTION!

Chicago girls, several members of wealthy families, decided several months ago to show Brazilians just what a Russian ballet was like. But instead the Brazilians showed them a perfectly good revolution. Anxiety was felt for their safety, as no word was received from them for days after the fighting in Sao Paulo started. News, however, has come they are in Argentina now. Here are three of them: Viola Sherment, upper left; Frances Dagnare, upper right, and Adris Miller, below.

Major Stuart MacLaren (left), commander of the British 'round-the-world flight, was handed this bouquet at the celebration staged in his honor upon his arrival in Tokyo. The presentation was made by the 15-year-old daughter of Sefu Karuchi, director of the Japan Imperial Aviation Society. Flight Officer W. N. ## VIOLATION OF TREATY CLAIM

British Make Representations on Changing Naval Vessels

London, July 30. (By the A. P.)—The British government has made representations to the governments of the United States and Japan that the alteration and elevation of guns on capital war vessels or expenditures for the purpose of increasing the radius of action of these would be, in the opinion of the British government, a breach of the Washington convention.

This declaration was made in the House of Commons today by Arthur Ponsonby, under-secretary of foreign affairs, in answer to a question.

VACATION IS URGED

President Should Take Rest, Friends Say

Washington, July 30.—Friends are urging upon President Coolidge a brief vacation immediately after his formal notification as Republican nominee August 14, but the executive has failed to reveal his plans for the immediate future.

President Coolidge, they point out, has been under heavy pressure during his year of office, being forced to assume the duties suddenly upon the death of President Harding.

Object Lesson Should Have Impressed Youth

A boy returned from school one day with a report that his scholarship had fallen below the usual average.

"Well," said the father, "you've fallen behind this month, have you?"

"Yes, sir."

"How did that happen?"

"Don't know, sir."

The father knew, if the son did not. He had observed a number of cheap novels scattered about the house, but had not thought it worth while to say anything until a fitting opportunity should offer itself. A basket of apples stood upon the floor, and he said:

"Empty out those apples, and take the basket and bring it to me half full of chips."

Suspecting nothing, the son obeyed.

"And now," he continued, "put those apples back in the basket."

When half the apples were replaced, the son said:

"Father, they roll off; I can't put in any more."

"Put them in, I tell you."

"But, father, I can't put them in."

"Put them in! No, of course you can't put them in. Do you expect to fill a basket half full of chips and then fill it with apples? You said you did not know why you fell behind at school. I will tell you. Your mind is like that basket. It will not hold more than so much, and here you have been for the past month filling it up with chip-dirt—cheap novels."—Bombay Guardian

Cruel Human Sacrifices Part of Aztec Religion

In ancient Mexico, the Mexico of the Aztecs, human sacrifices were not only the custom, but practically the only sacrifice offered. But mostly the sacrifices were composed of offenders, law-breakers and enemies. Enemies were generally offered up in preference to victims of their own race.

Another civilization much like the Aztecs was the Incas. The Aztecs and the people of the Incas worshipped a sun god much as the Egyptians and the Babylonians, although the moon was a sort of lesser divinity to each, finding its counterpart in the Egyptian Isis.

The human sacrifices were unnecessarily cruel. The victim was either laid upon a regular sacrificial table and had his heart cut out by a few incisions, or else was put upon an eminence and armed with a blunt wooden sword. He was then attacked successively by men armed with obsidian swords and very sharp. He fought until he was killed. Many evidences of these cruelties have been excavated.

There was another custom, that of a priest praying a person to death. This was believed quite possible. Anyone whom a priest was known as praying to die was certain to die. For the most part they died, killed by terror.—Bruce Bryan, in Art and Archeology.

$2,000,000 TO BUILD U. S. FOREST ROADS

By NEA Service Washington, July 30.—Nearly $2,000,000 will be expended within the next year by the U. S. Department of Agriculture for the construction and improvement of highways running through and adjacent to the national forests of the country.

With the addition of state funds, the money spent for better roads in the national forest areas will run well up toward the three million mark.

The states in which federal funds will be used for this purpose, include Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Idaho, Utah, Minnesota, Montana and Colorado, and the territory of Alaska.

The result is expected to be a greater increase in motoring through these wonder spots for tourists and a greater interest in the national parks and other reservations.

More than 250 miles of new roads will be constructed, and several more miles of completed highway will be improved by resurfacing, widening or reggrading.

Sweden has issued 50,000 licenses for receiving sets.

CAL LISTENS, THINKS BEST, SAYS WHITE HOUSE CLERK

By Harry B. Hunt

NEA Service Writer

Washington, July 30.—Jud Welliver, ex-newspaper man, now chief clerk at the White House, has been giving considerable thought of late to analyzing, or trying to analyze, that political enigma, his boss, Calvin Coolidge.

Perhaps it is injudicious of us to tip Cal off to the fact that Jud has been dissecting him, metaphorically speaking. Maybe Cal doesn't like to be dissected.

Maybe his New England conscience will lead him to demand that Jud put in his time looking after the affairs of his job as chief clerk, not in trying to figure out how the wheels go round in the president's mental mechanism.

Still, since Cal is a candidate and Jud's analysis is a favorable one, we guess he won't fire Jud, so here goes:

The president, Welliver says, after 10 months of close observation, after two things superlatively well. They are:

1. Listening.

2. Thinking.

Things we live with

Clothing that touches and warms us, food that strengthens us, home furnishings that comfort our bodies, luxuries that lift our minds—these are the things that really matter in our intensely personal lives.

The better clothes, foods and pleasures that others enjoy, we strive to enjoy too—labor daily to secure them.

The advertising columns help you identify wares worth while. They lift the best prominently before you. They help you determine which dealers can serve you.

They contain personal messages to you.
